Landon Challenges Roosevelt on Issues

Loyalists Storm Lines of Rebels; Occupy 3 Cities

Aid From Russia Reported Ready

Spain Charges Italians Are Awaiting Order to Attack Catalonia.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Oct. 29.—Spurred by reinforcements with "tanks and aviation," loyalist infantrymen smashed at Fascist insurgent lines south of Madrid tonight, the war ministry announced.

The government counter attack against the rebel siege of the capital resulted in recapture of three strategic towns in the beleagured sector, government officials claimed.

Beginning at dawn in response to a militant proclamation by Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, the loyalist militiamen advanced rapidly southward along the Madrid-Toledo highway, retaking Torrejon de la Calzada and Torrejon de Velasco. East of the high road other forces drove rebel warriors from Sesena, just west of the Madrid-Aranjuez road and approximately 22 miles south of the capital.

Planes, Tanks Added.

"Fascist bands which have been approaching Madrid have already exhausted their strength and while they are disintegrating, our forces are becoming stronger every day," asserted Largo Caballero.

"We now have tanks and aviation, which are important arms, to pursue and destroy the enemy, but we need also the courage of the valiant militia and the complete will to conquer."

Coincident with the premier's announcement, informed Spanish sources in Paris tonight said a new government army, equipped with Russian tanks and planes, has been gathered at the southeastern cities of Albacete and Alicante to attack the rear of insurgent armies in time to save Madrid.

Well-informed government sympathizers said this army had been organized secretly for weeks.

Says Action Due in Week.

It has more than 110 modern Russian tanks and many new bombing and scouting planes, they asserted. Some of the latter are American-made, sent indirectly to the Spanish government.

Motorized columns using the new equipment soon will be sent westward to Aranjuez and thence to Toledo, the Paris sources said, to attack the insurgents from their unguarded rear.

The new army was said to be completely equipped with ammunition and supplies, and the informers declared the force included many technical experts, some Russian and some from other countries, who volunteered within recent weeks to help Madrid.

This followed by one day de-

Il Duce to Reveal Plans for Italo-German Trade Demands.

To Give Program Over Air Sunday

Also Will Announce His Recognition of Rebels, Observers Believe.

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 29.—Premier Mussolini will put forward Sunday a dramatic plan for a realignment of world powers and the stimulation of world commerce, it was reported tonight. The plan, the report said, will be carried to the entire world by radio from Milan, where Il Duce will address the Lombard Fascists.

Mussolini, in the course of his speech, will announce Italy's recognition of Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel government in Spain, it was reported.

Il Duce's plan, it was said, will be an outgrowth of the recent conversations between his foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and Fuehrer Adolf Hitler in Germany. It was discussed in detail during their meeting, it was said, and Germany is ready to work in full accord with Italy in realizing it.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the broadcast. It will be translated simultaneously into all widely spoken languages—presumably French, German, Spanish and English.

There was wide speculation here as to the details of the plan. Presumably it will be based on what Prince Bismarck of Germany delighted in calling "realpolitik"—that is, a realization of conditions as they exist.

Both Mussolini and Hitler have been violent in denouncing what they consider the "namby-pamby" school of European politics based on peace pacts and the League of Nations.

In view of his past statements, it would not be surprising if Mussolini suggests the following points:

1. An enlarged field of economic opportunity for Italy and Germany, both of whom consider their expanding populations underprivileged.
2. A united front among European nations in opposing Bolshevism.
3. A general lowering of tariffs and trade restrictions.

Chicago Boy Dies After Long Fight On Rare Disease

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The rare malady that evoked Nation-wide interest in his case today brought death to 7-year-old Phillip Levitt.

Five blood transfusions, a flood of suggestions from physicians and offers of aid failed to halt the inroads of the dread disease –viridans streptococci infection.

During his four-month siege, scores of persons in all sections of the United States begged an opportunity to give blood for the brave boy. They volunteered by letter, by telephone, by telegraph and in person.

But blood of a certain type from someone who had recovered from the malady was needed.

Maurice Oldham, husky 13-year-old son of City Commissioner R. Mack Oldham, of Lexington, Ky., fulfilled the specifications. He came here September 2. Thrice his veins were tapped during his 13-day mission of mercy. Little Phillip rallied. But five days ago the infection centered about his heart caused another sinking spell.

William Furness, 36, unemployed Chicagoan who had survived a similar attack, gave a transfusion. Then, in a final desperate effort, the father, Morris Levitt, an insurance broker, submitted to a transfusion for his son yesterday.

Dead germs of the disease were injected into the elder Levitt several months ago in the hope that by becoming a "human test tube" a suitable serum would be developed in his blood.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, said:

"The impression of medical science that this rare disease is generally fatal has been confirmed."

Mrs. Simpson Orders Costly Paris Wardrobe

American Firm Designing an Outfit Which May Include Trousseau.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Ernest Simpson, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, and just now the most-talked-of woman in the world, has ordered one of the largest and most costly wardrobes turned out by any Paris fashion house this season, the United Press learned today.

The wardrobe hints at a winter season crowned with social engagements for the friend of King Edward VIII, as there are many evening gowns. Those persons who speculate that she might marry the British monarch suggest that the large collection of ultra-fashionable clothes may include "Wally's" third trousseau.

Meanwhile in London, King Edward was believed to have had tea with Mrs. Simpson at her palatial Cumberland terrace home this afternoon.

The United Press correspondent in Paris today watched a corps of midinettes working on the latest creations ordered by Mrs. Simpson. Every garment was of striking simplicity. When she dines with King Edward or is seen in West End theaters or other fashionable places in London this winter she will be dressed with extreme modesty.

Many of the gowns will have classical lines—no fluffy frills, no eccentric effects.

She patronized an American couturier who came to Paris from Chicago several years ago and attained enormous success in the French capital. She crosses from London several times a year to choose new clothes and her latest order, which has just been filled after requiring virtually the full time—even overtime—of the corps of workers, includes a smart "week-end" costume of brown wool.

The skirt is made straight and short and is worn with a tailored, fitted jacket of the same brown wool, while a blue angora blouse is tailored and fitted on the same lines as the jacket.

For afternoon she chose a gown of black crepe which is made with a draped bodice and a plain, flaring skirt. The only trimming is a wide belt embroidered in green and white to match embroidery on the cuffs of the sleeves.

Mrs. Simpson has a taste so simple it is severe when it comes to evening gowns. In this connection Paris dressmakers recalled

Traveler Beheaded, 6 Others Are Hurt In Pennsy Wreck

By the Associated Press.

Princeton Junction, N. J., Oct. 29. One man was decapitated and at least six others injured tonight, when the Clevelander, crack Pennsylvania Railroad flyer, was wrecked here, blocking the railroad's four-track main line.

The train broke between the seventh and eighth cars and the engine, traveling at 75 miles an hour, dragged the forward seven cars almost a mile.

The man killed was riding in the seventh car which was dragged on its side and crushed.

E. E. Dowdee, of Westchester, Pa., said he saw the head of the man sitting beside him in the seventh car fly over his shoulder.

With all four main-line tracks blocked by the wreck, railroad officials sought to route Gov. Alfred M. Landon's special campaign train, due to leave New York at 12:20 a. m., over another railroad.

League Spends $90,000 to Get Colored Votes for Roosevelt

Elder Michaux and Cab Calloway Among Those Paid Various Amounts in Campaign, Statement to House Clerk Shows.

How Elder Michaux, colored Washington evangelist; Cab Calloway, several colored bishops and clergy, and some white school teachers were lined up for Roosevelt by the Good Neighbor League, Inc., of Washington, was revealed yesterday in statements filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives.

Shown in scores of pages of itemized political expenditures, as require by the anticorrupt practices act, is a tale told in figures of the formation of the Good Neighbor League, Inc., by Dr. Stanley High, former editor of the Christian Herald, and the way it set about getting the colored vote in key States.

Starting on March 1, 1936, the league showed a balance of "none" but by October 21 it had received gifts amounting to more than $90,000 from prominent Democrats and the Democratic National Committee, and had spent even more than that.

A large portion of the money was spent, according to the statement, in organizing "emancipation celebrations," with the aid of colored clergymen. One bishop, R. R. Wright, of 241 West 136th street, New York, received a salary of $100 a week from the league.

Cab Calloway received $1,000. Elder Michaux was called to New York for several consultations and once took his choir with him to a rally at Madison Square Garden. For this he received $1,154.27 "railroad fare for the choir" and $100 bus fare for the choir around the city.

That same day, September 21 on the statement, he received $499.50

Baltimore Sun Declines to Aid Landon's Race

Paper Is Unable to Choose Between 2 Candidates as Election Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Contending the candidates of both major parties are "heavily tarred with the same stick * * * of authoritarian government," the Baltimore Sun (Independent Democrat) announced today it "will not attempt to influence the voters in favor of either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Landon."

The Sun announced some weeks ago it would not advocate the re-election of President Roosevelt, but did not, at that time, take a stand on Gov. Landon's candidacy. In that editorial the paper asked:

"Does Gov. Landon believe that the fundamental policy to which the Government should commit itself is a genuine competitive system, with such liberal adjustments in lower tariff policies, in debt policies, in credit policies, in currency stabilization policies in law-enforcement policies and in labor policies as will promote the kind of competition that is healthy and real?"

In today's editorial the Sun says:

"It will not be necessary for the Sun to say, to the citizen who has read with understanding and discrimination Gov. Landon's Des Moines and Minneapolis speeches, that this paper is no more able now to advocate the election of the Republican candidate than it is able to advocate the election of the Democratic candidate.

"These speeches are the opposite of the liberalism in which the Sun believes and for which it has fought.

"The bounty on export crops, urged by Mr. Landon in Des Moines, not only goes beyond anything Mr. Roosevelt has done in subsidies. If continued, it would compel the very system of bureaucratic control over agricultural production which Mr. Landon denounces.

"We know that the voter must make his choice, even the voter who is as definitely opposed as is the Sun to widespread paternalism and to the inevitable consequence of a spreading bureaucracy. But the voter may cast his ballot in silence and make no effort to create among his fellows a favorable impression of either of the candidates. The newspaper has no ballot, to be cast quietly or otherwise. It has an opinion which it expresses for the sole purpose of influencing others. The Sun will not attempt to influence the voters in favor of either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Landon."

Britisher Changes Mind, Leaves Harbor Grace Despite Warnings.

Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Oct. 29.—Capt. James Mollison, British aviator, took off from here at 3:41 p. m. (Eastern standard time) today for London.

Clad in the dinner jacket he wore under his flying clothes when he took off from New York yesterday morning, Mollison started the second leg of the flight which was to land him eventually in Cape Town, South Africa.

He said he expected to reach Croydon airport, London, in ten hours.

Earlier the flier said he would postpone the flight because of unfavorable weather reports over the mid-Atlantic. Suddenly, however, he changed his mind, stepped in his low-wing Bellanca monoplane,

Court Enjoins AAA Milk Code, Bars Price Rise

Holding unconstitutional a section of the Agriculture Adjustment Act under which Washington's recent milk-marketing agreement and order was established, District Supreme Court Justice Oscar R. Luhring yesterday granted an injunction restraining enforcement of the order's provisions.

In granting the injunction to 12 Maryland and Virginia milk producers, Justice Luhring cited a similar case in Boston where dairymen were granted an injunction last July.

His decision eliminates the threat of increased retail milk prices by voiding last week's AAA ruling boosting milk prices to producers about 4 cents a gallon. Justice Luhring held that Federal regulation of milk distribution, involving price-fixing, was outlawed by the United States Supreme Court's decision invalidating the AAA act.

By terms of the marketing agreement and order, all milk received by

President Slaps At 'Pay Envelope' Foes of Security

Executive Defends Balanced Economy

Dedicates Camden Park, Returns to Washington to Plan Wind-up.

A Staff Correspondent.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House last night to rest after his four-State semifinal campaign swing. He will review papers of State briefly today before heading North again this afternoon for the two major addresses remaining in his drive for re-election, scheduled for the Brooklyn Academy of Music tonight and Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

In his aggressive push through Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware yesterday, the President, by turns appearing angry, sarcastic and supremely confident, struck back hard at two fundamental Republican onslaughts on the New Deal, smashing bluntly at Harrisburg against "their market-basket campaign," and at Wilkes-Barre and Camden against "pay envelope propaganda."

His trip was marked by one of the most hysterical receptions he has ever had, when Philadelphia turned out several hundred thousand strong along the parade route, in throngs estimated by police as even greater than those which saw the Mummer's parade during the Democratic Convention and set a new record for Philadelphia crowds.

The shouted welcome was even more vociferous than that accorded the Chief Executive in New York City yesterday. As the cars moved at snail-pace through the bellowing jam of people, the cry was shouted again and again, "It's in the bag for Roosevelt."

Several women knelt praying in the street; others were crying and screaming, "I saw him. I saw Roosevelt."

In Camden, N. J., the President dedicated Roosevelt Plaza, a new park, in an address defending the New Deal's "balanced national economy," with the reminder that the month of October "marks the end of one whole year in which there was not a single national bank failure—the first 12-month period in 55 years that was free from such failures."

The President, in the Wilkes-Barre ceremonies commemorating John Mitchell, labor leader and hero of the coal miners, denounced with unusual vigor "a handful of employers and some newspapers" who "mislead and coerce labor with regard to the social security act."

Wrathfully, he blasted at this "propaganda which has one clear objective—to sabotage the social security act."

Speaking from a platform erected alongside a railroad spur, at almost two stories height above a huge flag-waving crowd of miners and laborers which spread over several acres of Wyoming Valley, he pulled out all the stops in his organ-toned

By Robert C. Albright.

New York, Oct. 29.—In a colorful and dramatic ending to his campaign in the East, Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight called on President Roosevelt to "have sufficient faith" in the American people to reveal specifically his future plans for AAA and NRA and to state whether he has renounced those schemes of planned economy in favor of private enterprise.

Not only did the Republican Presidential nominee propound three definite and specific questions to his Democratic opponent, but he also demanded that he answer them 48 hours later from the same platform in Madison Square Garden here from which Gov. Landon spoke tonight. President Roosevelt will make his last major campaign speech from that spot on Saturday night.

None could remember an occasion when a challenger for the Presidency had so sharply and specifically catechized an incumbent President as Gov. Landon did tonight. But before doing so, he recited his own political creed, summarizing his attitude toward the major issues which have developed in the campaign. He demanded that Mr. Roosevelt be no less specific and candid with the voters before the Tuesday election.

In cavernous Madison Square Garden, packed to the rafters with more than 20,000 wildly cheering humans, while even more than that number jammed the streets outside, Gov. Landon was given a tumultuous welcome, lasting 11 minutes. The crowd, whooping hysterically, stood on the chairs and wildly waved sunflowers, while those in charge of the meeting tried vainly to restore order that the candidate might start his address.

Once started, Gov. Landon was halted time after time by cheers that greeted his emphatic points.

In this giant stage for political rallies, prize fights, rodeos and jumbo performances, Gov. Landon invited the President 48 hours hence to "tell where you stand."

"Tell us not in generalities, but clearly so that no one can mistake your meaning," said the Republican Presidential nominee. "And tell us why you have evaded the issue until the eve of the election."

Reciting his creed—belief in free enterprise, the Constitution, religious and racial tolerance and the rights of minorities—Landon pledged himself to follow the course of civic righteousness on the trail blazed by Theodore Roosevelt.

In his "challenge," he asked the President specifically three ques-

Will Is Missing; Trio to Administer Estate of Couzens

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 29.—Three special administrators were appointed today for the estate of United States Senator James Couzens after Mrs. Couzens filed a petition in probate court saying her husband, who accumulated a fortune in the automobile industry, did not leave a will.

Judge Thomas C. Murphy appointed Mayor Frank Couzens, of Detroit, the Senator's son; Clarence E. Wilcox, of Detroit, and William J. Norton, of Pleasant Ridge, Mich., as special administrators.

Michigan law provides that when a man dies without leaving a will his estate be divided, after claims are settled, one-third to the widow and two-thirds to the children. Wilcox sai Couzens' estate is valued between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.

Mercury to Drop In D. C. Tonight, Bureau Predicts

Colder weather, contrasting bitterly with yesterday's semibalmy maximum of 62 at 4 p. m., will reach the District tonight in the wake of a storm area centering over the Great Lakes, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Forecast today was for fair and slighly warmer weather, followed by a decided drop in temperature this evening.

Yesterday morning's low was 35, recorded at 7 a. m. The mercury rose steadily thereafter. The weather was ideal for hikers, golfers, motorists and equestrians, who frequented the city's bridle paths.

Tonight officials at the Weather Bureau said the skies will be overcast. Before dawn tomorrow the mercury will sink below freezing, they predicted.

President Slaps At Security Act Critics' Tactics

voice. He struck at "the arrogance and ruthlessness" of such employers, and concluded with an affirmation of his belief that "American workers * * * will not be fooled by this campaign any more than they were frightened by the strong-arm squads of the past."

This morning's speech, at which the President was introduced by boom-voiced John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, was addressed specifically to workers and was one in which any employers present could have found little to cheer.

The President sketched with bold strokes for the cheering miners, who shouted to the skies at the end of nearly every sentence, a simple picture of the social security act, broadly showing the employers paying out three dollars to the social security fund for every one put in by the worker, with all of the money to be held in trust for workers, unemployment and old-age insurance.

"Three for one!" exclaimed the President. "Three for one, my friends, and there's the rub! That's what these propaganda-spreading employers object to. The record extending back several years shows that their purpose has always been to compel the worker alone to put up all the premiums both for their unemployment insurance and their old-age insurance."

So heated did he become that he started to deviate from his prepared address, jerking himself back to the subject just as it seemed he would launch into extemporaneous remarks. He said:

"These propagandists and their well-known allies—oh, I don't care to describe them to you—you all know them—are driven in their desperation to the contemptible, unpatriotic suggestion that some future Congress will steal these insurance funds for other purposes."

The crowd roared delightedly.

Stops at Sunbury.

With Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), and the burly Lewis aboard, the President's special then swept off toward Harrisburg, with a brief extemporaneous speech on the need for flood control projects at Sunbury as the only unprogrammed stop.

Throughout the traditionally Republican territory, waving crowds lined the railroad tracks for a mile or two near each station, merely to see the train sweep by.

The crowd along the streets in this Republican stronghold was one of the most enthusiastic yet encountered. Local official estimates proudly insisted there were 100,000 people along the route of march and around the Capitol steps, where a tall bunting-draped platform had been set up. There may not have been that many, but even the most conservative reporters set the total of the throng jammed around the Capitol at about 50,000.

Here the President, in happier mood, used sarcasm with tremendous effect, after being introduced by Gov. Earle as "the greatest American of our time."

Recognizing the effectiveness of Republican propaganda that the New Deal has insisted on economic scarcity, with corresponding high prices to the consumer, the President made a head-on assault on "their market-basket campaign."

Interrupted by Cheers.

Interrupted several times by the cries of "three cheers for the next President," and "Down with Landon!" The President, smiling broadly, said:

"Their (the Republican) doctrine was to give definite help to the top and to utter pious hopes for the bottom. Twelve years of that brought us to that period of 1929 to 1933.

He pictured the Republicans as making promises in the cities "which they are careful to hide from the farmers," and reversing this process in the rural districts. Laughing, he added:

"Now isn't that a nice fairy story? But you and I know you can't eat your cake in the city and have your cake on the farm. You and I know that after 12 years of that policy there wasn't any cake and there was very little bread. The American people are through with that kind of emptiness and they propose to remain through with it."

Satirically, to the intense delight of the throng, he changed his voice to a mincing tone to remind them:

"You all remember that good old Republican slogan which was trotted out and polished up for every political campaign—the slogan of the 'full dinner pail.' The full dinner pail turned out to be the empty market basket."

Back to the train, the President sped to Philadelphia for a motor parade through the city and across the bridge to Camden, N. J., for a speech dedicating Roosevelt Plaza, a park with wide gravel-covered drives, trees, grass and shrubs which was for years known as "Camden's $3,000,000 parking lot," as plan after plan to make it a bus terminal fell through.

Returning to Philadelphia after his Camden address, the President motored again through the crowded streets, before entraining for Wilmington, the heart of the Du Pont country, and supposedly strongly anti-Roosevelt.

Absence of Debate on Social Security Program During Presidential Campaign Lamentable.

By Franklyn Waltman

IT seems a great shame that this year's Presidential campaign—distinguished only for the failure of either side to debate the real problems facing this country—should come to its weary end with a sharp conflict raging over the social security program. And it seems the greater pity that both sides to the controversy should engage in distortion by uttering half-truths.

WALTMAN.

The social security program, in principle, is one of the worthwhile, truly progressive, New Deal measures. I am speaking generally, and not as to details. The existing law is far from perfect, and may have to be revised, whoever is President, to make it workable. It contains some provisions which may have widespread economic repercussions which may seriously injure those it is especially designed to help.

But the principle that in an industrial society such as ours government should take a hand in securing workers, within reason, against the vicissitudes of old age and unemployment is a sound one. This country has greatly lagged behind other industrial nations in making provision of such security compulsory and President Roosevelt deserves credit for having brought about a measure long overdue.

This question of social security—of protecting the workers of this country against distress in their old age and unemployment—should be one of national interest, above the partisanship of political parties—such as the integrity of our courts and police, national defense, our educational system and the health of the Nation.

Consequently it is lamentable that the social security program has been made a football in this campaign. Political campaigns, statements to the contrary notwithstanding, are poor educators of the Nation.

If evidence of this were required, all we need do is study the many conflicting statements in campaign utterances made this week on social security—and the masses of the people are surprisingly ignorant about the provisions of the social security act which affects directly the lives of most of them.

Gov. Alf M. Landon's discussion of the New Deal social security program at Milwaukee several weeks ago was dignified and proper, even if you disagree with his criticisms or his proposed remedies. It undoubtedly would have been all to the good if after that speech a real debate had taken place on the necessity for and wisdom of the requirement for a huge reserve fund under the act—or, whether the levy on employers and employes should be reduced or abolished and supplanted or supplied by a grant from the general Treasury—or whether the system should be decentralized and administered by the States.

President Roosevelt, however, did not undertake to join the issue with Gov. Landon in such a debate. He left the task to his subordinates. Gov. Landon has not seen fit to return to the subject and now in the closing weeks of the campaign his party henchmen have sought, working through employers and pay envelopes, to stir up a revulsion against the whole social security idea by telling only half-truths about it.

Nothing said in the pay envelope slips dealing with the social security act which the Republican National Committee so obligingly supplies to employers is untrue. Nor was there anything untrue on the placard being distributed for posting in factories which the Security Board denounced as "contemptible and unpatriotic." But neither tell the whole truth—neither makes clear to the employe that the sums deducted from his salary are intended to pay old-age and unemployment benefits to him.

Nor was President Roosevelt in his belated, specific defense of the social security act at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., any more candid than the authors of the propaganda designed to scare employes. He, too, failed to tell the whole story.

"Get these facts straight," asserted the President and then he went on to explain that the money collected from employes and employers under the social security act, like "premiums on any other insurance policy," are "held by the Government solely for the benefit of the worker in his old age." That may be the President's intention, but nothing of the sort is provided by the law.

The social security act provides for the payment of these collections into the general fund of the Treasury and there may be spent for any purpose approved by Congress. Under the law Congress is supposed to make an annual appropriation out of the general fund to pay the old-age and unemployed benefits intended under the act—but there is no barrier to Congress using the money for some other purpose. Policyholders, in private companies, are protected against the latter defaulting on their contract by the law—but Congress is a law unto itself and no contractual relationship is involved.

But that was not the only half-truth uttered by the President at Wilkes-Barre. In order to impress workers with the fact that their employers also contributed under the social security act, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "beginning January first, for every $1 which the worker is asked (sic) to put into an old-age account for himself, employers are required (sic) under the Federal act to contribute $3 to protect the worker from both unemployment and old age" and he added: "Three to one! There's the rub."

Aside from the fact that Mr. Roosevelt's words give the impression the worker's tax is voluntary, whereas it is as compulsory as is the employer's tax, it also gives the impression that when the social security system is fully set up and operating the employer will pay $3 to every $1 the employe will pay.

Although that is true during the year 1937, it is not true when all payments reach their proposed maximums. Then the employers' payment will be $6 to the employes' $3, or two to one. Due to the fact that the pay-roll tax is graduated upward more rapidly than the old-age pension taxes, it happens during the process that the employer, in two years, pays $4 to each $1 paid by his worker. But in the end the final tax paid by the worker is 3 per cent of his salary for old-age pensions, while the employer pays 3 per cent of his pay roll on account of unemployment insurance, and 3 per cent of all salaries not in excess of $3,000 on account of old-age pensions—in other words 6 per cent to the employe's 3 per cent.

The subject already is difficult enough to understand without being further complicated by distortions on the part of those who should speak with authority. But Mr. Roosevelt never was good at arithmetic!

'Bullet' Testimony Enters Amott Case

Wetumpka, Ala., Oct. 29 (AP).—The trial of Frank E. Green, of Montgomery, for the "hitch-hike" slaying of Wesley D. Amott, Government investigator, of Washington, D. C., took a sensational turn tonight when a State witness testified he removed a bullet from the base of Amott's skull.

Jim Gibson, defense counsel, vigorously objected to testimony given by James T. Atkinson, laboratory assistant to State Toxicologist H. W. Nixon.

"The defendant was charged with killing the deceased by a blow on the head, the State contending the deceased was struck on the head with a blunt instrument," Gibson shouted.

Solicitor Winston Huddleston, who sprang the surprise at the end of two days of testimony by State witnesses, pointed out that Green was indicted in a bill stating he killed Amott by striking him on the head or "by other means to grand jury unknown."

F. C. C. Defends Radio Stations' Debate 'Censor'

Columbia Within Rights in Vandenberg Action, Commission Holds.

By the Associated Press.

The Communications Commission made public letters yesterday in which it held the Columbia Broadcasting Co. acted within its rights in cutting off some of its stations from the radio "debate" with President Roosevelt's recorded voice, presented by Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, October 17.

The commission, in a letter answering a number of protests against the action of the company, said the 1934 communications act "expressly denies to the commission any power of censorship over the radio communications or signals transmitted by any radio station."

The company cut off some of the stations in its chain because Vandenberg's program "included phonograph recordings in violation of the broadcasting company's rules," the commission wrote to the protestant, W. R. Church, New York City. Vandenberg presented recordings of President Roosevelt's voice as part of the "debate."

Church wrote the commission that "as an American I protest against the censorship laid down on Vandenberg's speech."

The commission replied the selection and arrangement of broadcast programs "in the public interest is a duty which the communications act places solely upon the licensees" * * * and that the "matter of whether it will broadcast mechanical reproductions is, therefore, a question for the decision of each station licensee."

Its regulations, the commission added, require mechanical reproductions to be announced as such before they are used.

Port Arthur, Tex., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Homer Brooks, Communist candidate for Governor of Texas, was arrested here tonight, shortly before he was scheduled to make a campaign speech.

Chie of Police H. F. Baker said he took Brooks into custody for "investigation." Brooks was held incommunicado.

At Austin, meanwhile, two members of the State Legislature reissued a statement charging communism was being taught at the University of Texas. In Dallas, a committee of the "Legion of Honor" opened an investigation of alleged communism in the city schools, and in Houston the business agent of the International Seamen's Union charged Communists and radicals were attempting to gain control of waterfront unions through terroristic activities.

Trotzky Suit Forbidden.

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Norwegian government today forbade Leon Trotzky, exiled Russian Bolshevist leader, to sue the newspaper Arbeideren for libel on a charge that a Moscow dispatch printed in the Communist organ accused him of co-operating with German secret police. The attorney general said the government's action was motivated by a wish not to hurt friendly relations with Russia.

The Campaign Arena

New York, Oct. 28 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight urged his New York followers to vote for William Bleakley, the Republican gubernatorial nominee. At the same time he specifically avoided an indorsement of Gov. Landon for the Presidency.

The priest accused the "Democratic machine" of responsibility for keeping the Union Party ticket off the ballot, and addressing a rally here, based his indorsement of Bleakley on that.

"The National Union is not going to indorse Mr. Landon," he said. "We know how to lose."

"But if I were a citizen of New York State, I do tell you I would cast my ballot for Bleakley."

New York, Oct. 29 (AP).—Nassau County District Attorney Martin W. Littleton, Republican, today announced he was revoking a gift of his soldier's bonus money to Princeton University because he said faculty members, whom he accused of espousing "insane, immoral politics," favored socialism and the Roosevelt Administration.

Several years ago Princeton urged alumni to pledge their bonus money to a professors' retirement fund, Littleton said, and he did.

Littleton declared he recently read newspaper reports that various departments at Princeton gave majorities for Roosevelt in a straw poll and that some voted Socialist.

New Albany, Ind., Oct. 29 (AP).—Representative William Lemke, Union Party candidate for President, tonight charged that "the reduction in property values" was the "result of a deliberate attempt on the part of the bankers of the United States to so deflate all values, wages and salaries to the end that they would achieve even greater control over this Nation."

Lemke asserted before a mass meeting here that "every person who bought a home or farm within the last decade," he said, "knows how the manipulation of money and credit by the banker has fleeced and robbed him of a large part of his life savings."

In an appraisal of the Presidential candidates, the Workers Alliance, organization of unemployed and WPA workers, reported yesterday that only Norman Thomas and Earl Browder could be counted upon to adopt its program, says the Associated Press.

Comparing the major party candidates, the alliance, claiming to represent 800,000 members, said "bad as the condition of the unemployed is under Mr. Roosevelt, it would probably be worse under Mr. Landon."

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, today declared that Gov. Alf M. Landon "is indeed justified in remarking in New York City that he and Al Smith are as close together as they can be—they're in a common grave together."

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 29 (AP).—Gov. Philip F. La Follette made public today a telegram to Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate, in which he declared "your charges concerning the administration of Federal funds granted to me as Governor are false."

The telegram was in answer to Knox's assertion in southern Wisconsin campaign speeches yesterday that "a lot of politicians are now being paid salaries and expenses "out of a $200,000 fund which "President Roosevelt, without authority of Congress, gave La Follette." Knox said the money was sent for the use of the destitute.

"The Federal funds you referred to were not granted * * * for poor relief," the La Follette telegram stated. "They were specifically granted to cover the administrative expenses of the Farm and Home Credit Administration, the State planning board and to co-ordinate the work of local, State and Federal agencies."

Senate to Study Employer 'Plot' On Old-Age Act

La Follette Charges Drive to Intimidate Workers Is Under Way.

By the United Press.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, announced last night that his Senate Civil Liberties Committee would immediately investigate a campaign by employers allegedly to misrepresent the social security act "through pay envelope pressure."

As the political battle over the statute surged forward, the Social Security Board also issued a formal explanation of the act's old-age benefit provisions.

The board's statement was addressed to "employes of industrial and business establishments, factories, shops, mines, mills, stores, offices and other places of business," and said in part:

"What you get from the Government plan will always be more than you have paid in taxes and usually more than you can get for yourself by putting away the same amount of money each week in some other way."

G. O. P. Assails Act.

Meanwhile the Republican National Committee issued a statement saying the act would "hit" every employe, "man, woman and child," except on the farm and in domestic service, but that the young woman who works less than five years before marrying will have her pay "docked" and "she will never get a nickel back."

Another development in the controversy, daily growing more heated, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York one of the authors of the act, charged the Republican committee and Gov. Landon "propose to wreck and demolish the whole structure of social security throughout the Nation."

Charges employers are inserting in pay envelopes notices that employes' pay was to be "cut" to pay the required tax into the Federal fund created by the act, aroused further Democratic comment yesterday.

Senator Bennett C. Clark, of Missouri, at Indianapolis, Ind., accused Republicans of "efforts to compel employes to vote against their best interests" eH said three out of four Republican members of the House an dnumerous Republican Senators voted for the social security measure.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, in Chicago, defended the legislation, pointing out "all qualified persons will receive the payments regardless of the amountof money or property they have," and will not have to take any "pauper's oath."

The La Follette statement, issued from his Washington office, although it came from the Senator in Madison, Wis., referred to what he termed a "malicious drive," and said:

"The committee will investigate these matters immediately and thoroughly in accordance with its usual practice and with the end in view of exposing those responsible for this unscrupulous intimidation of labor."

The Progressive, who seeks to rally liberal and labor voters behind the President in this campaign, said:

Tactics Scored.

"The recent well organized and grossly misleading attack on the Social Security Act bears all the earmarks of a malicious drive designed solely through misstatement of fact to coerce labor and to invade the sanctity of the ballot box.

"In this most recent attempt on the part of some employers to infringe upon the civil and political rights of the workingman through pay-envelope pressure, there is evidence of intimidation and coercion of the same general character as that attempted in some industries and plants through the notorious use of spies and paid thugs who prevent labor from exercising its legitimate rights.

"Included in the information already received by the committee is a charge that an agency operating in three of the largest cities in the country, which admittedly has been engaged in anti-labor activities for a long period of years, is participating in this drive of misrepresentation and intimidation concerning the social security act. It is further charged that this agency boasts of operating a service designed to discourage union activity and describes the results of its operations as follows: 'A union man can't get anywhere near the place; when a union man does sneak into the plant he is spotted and discouraged until he quits.'

"The committee will investigate these matters immediately and thoroughly in accordance with its usual practice with the end in view of exposing those responsible for this unscrupulous intimidation of labor."

News Guild Agrees To Settle Strike

New York, Oct. 29 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild made public today a letter to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, agreeing to accept Green's proposal for settlement of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer strike with two modifications.

In a statement which followed issuance of the letter, H. M. Bitner, general manager of Hearst newspapers, said the management of the Post-Intelligencer, at the solicitation of Green, already had accepted the proposal of the labor body without modification.

"Naturally," he added, "any modification of the proposal of the American Federation of Labor is unacceptable to the management of the Post-Intelligencer.

The Guild modifications provide that Frank J. Lynch and Everhardt Armstrong, whose dismissal led to the strike, be included among those reinstated, and that the negotiations committee have a representative of the American Newspaper Guild added, with President Green serving as arbiter in any matters remaining in dispute.

League Spends $90,000 to Win Colored Voters for Roosevelt for "meals and lodging" for the choir and $128.50 for his own expenses.

Interpreters saw in the vigorous campaign for colored votes an attempt by Democrats to win over permanently affection of the colored citizenry, traditionally with the Republicans since Lincoln's day.

Day's Expenses $1,782.

Elder Michaux's total expenses for the day were listed at $1,782.27. According to his church here his choir of 156 departed for New York the morning of September 21 and was back in Washington at 7:15 a. m. the following day.

Cab Calloway received a down payment of $500 for his services to the party and $500 more after the rally at Madison Square Garden.

On October 7 Bishop R. C. Ransom of Wilberforce College in Ohio received $150 for expenses for a round trip to the league headquarters in New York.

The same day Bishop Wright was paid $850 for promotion of emancipation celebrations in 13 different towns. Bishop Wright also received that week $100 weekly salary, $500 for advertising in ten newspapers and $46.30 advance traveling expenses.

Others Summoned.

Seven men connected in various capacities with public schools and universities were summoned to headquarters in New York and received traveling money, in amounts ranging from $200 to Robert L. Finch, of St. Louis University, to $34.80 to Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction in Richmond.

James W. Gerard, ambassador to Germany during the Wilson Administration, was the largest single donor to the Good Neighbor campaign. He gave $5,000 August 26 and $500 on September 21, which he followed three weeks later with the largest contribution of all, $10,000.

Joseph E. Davies, Washington attorney and husband of the former Mrs. Edward Hutton, contributed $2,000 on October 15. Donald Richberg, former New Deal brain truster, contributed $1,500 on June 11 and $2,500 more a week later.

The Democratic National Committee poured thousands of dollars into the movement in a steady stream, especially about September 15. A list of national committee "loans" follows:

May 6	$2,000
July 31	2,500
August 13	2,500
August 21	2,500
September 11	5,000
September 15	1,000
September 19	2,500
September 26	2,500
September 30	1,000

October 5	2,500
October 7	1,500
October 8	1,500
October 14	750
October 15	1,000

Salaries and Expenses.

According to the statement, the largest portion of this stream of wealth was paid out in salaries and expense accounts. Stanley High, president of the league, received $300 a week salary from the day he organized the movement.

Elder Michaux, whose church is on Georgia avenue, has been campaigning strenuously for Roosevelt's re-election on the announced belief that "God put him in the White House."

Dr. High, a vigorous dry who fought Roosevelt on the liquor issue in 1932, is the first churchman to enter the President's war counsels. He was in conference almost daily with the President last spring. He helped the President write his campaign acceptance speech and has been an adviser and consultant on other speeches.

Various Amounts.

The Rev. D. Ward Nichols received $195.64 on one occasion and "salaries" of $240 on another; the Rev. R. C. Ransom was paid $150; the Rev. Elmer P. Gibson, $50 for expenses at Salisbury, Md.; the Rev. Bernard Ross, Parkersburg, W. Va., $25; the Rev. E. B. Williams, Benton Harbor, Mich., $50; the Rev. A. C. Sumpter, Cincinnati, Ohio, $25; the Rev. Alfred Watts, Patterson, N. J. The last five named received their money in connection with "emancipation celebrations," all being mailed checks October 15.

Alexander H. Frey, of the University of Pennsylvania received $46.40 traveling expenses; Robert L. Finch, of St. Louis University, $200; John A. The sum of $1,165 for printing was awarded the African Methodist Episcopal Publishing Co. for pamphlets.

Neutrality Broken, Commons Is Told

London, Oct. 29 (AP).—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin declared in Parliament tonight the British government felt the Spanish non-intervention pact had been broken by foreign sympathizers with both factions in the civil war.

"The general impression the government has formed," he said, "is that there have been some breaches, and arms sent to both sides. But they have not been anything near sufficient importance to cause us to modify our policy in regard to non-intervention."

He spoke after Britain's Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden defended in Parliament the Portuguese government against Russian charges of Spanish neutrality violation.

"Not a single one of the Soviet charges against the Portuguese government has been proven," he said.

As for Britain, Eden asserted as the galleries murmured, she would hold fast to the nonintervention pact despite opposition from Labor groups.

12 Hurt, La Rocque Aids Are Barricaded in Fight

Paris, (Friday), Oct. 30 (AP).—Two hundred members of Col. Francois de la Rocque's French Social Party early today were barricaded in a garage at Choisy-le-Roi, near here, after a clash with Communists, in which 12 persons were injured.

They were forced to take refuge in the garage when a column of Communists marched against a meeting of De la Rocque's party members late last night.

Police made several arrests and asked that mobile guards be sent from Paris to disperse the political rivals.

G. O. P. Grants To Clerics Hit By Democrats

Gifts of $5 Checks Called 'Bribery' and 'Astonishing Insult.'

A Maryland Representative and Senator yesterday called the mailing of checks for $5 to 400 colored pastors throughout the State by the Republican Party as "outrageous," and a number of colored preachers exhibited letters in which the Rev. Albert J. Mitchell, who sent the checks, offered the pastors a fixed scale of pay for attending a Republican rally in Baltimore.

Mitchell, district superintendent of the Washington Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Colored, offered $8 payment for cars coming to Baltimore from the Eastern Shore and $7 for cars coming from western and southern Maryland.

The Associated Press reported last night that the letters were on lettedheads of Mitchell's Clergy Crusade Circle of Maryland for Landon and Knox.

On Wednesday, Mitchell admitted that he sent 400 letters, some of them containing checks, asking colored clergymen to support the Republican ticket. The checks were signed by the chairman and the treasurer of the Republican State Committee.

"A low and a common attempt at bribery," was the comment of Representative Vincent Palmisano, Maryland Democrat, regarding the letters and the $5 checks.

"An astonishing insult," asserted Maryland's Democratic Senator George L. Radcliffe.

The letters inviting the ministers to the Baltimore meeting were sent out October 3, before the letters containing the checks. They said, in part:

"We are inviting you to a Statewide conference of the clergymen of the State of Maryland, to be held October 9, in the interests of the Landon and Knox campaign.

"We are in a position to say that those coming from out of town, the Eastern Shore, five coming in a car, we will allow $8 for the car; from the Western Shore, five coming in a car, we will allow $7; from Southern Maryland, five coming in a car, $7.

"Upon arrival give the list of the ministers coming in your car to the Rev. G. A. Crawley. The meeting will be called promptly at 12 o'clock. Dinner will be served to you free.

"Among the prominent persons to be present will be his honor, Gov. Harry W. Nice, Hon. William P. Lawson, chairman of the State Central Committe, and other prominent members of the party."

Madrid, Armed Afresh, Breaks Lines of Rebels

tailed Italian charges that Russia has sent arms and men to Spain on 20 occasions within the month.

It coincided, too, with announcement by the Spanish embassy in Paris of "confidential information" to the effect a fleet of Italian submarines was awaiting sailing orders at Gaeta, Italy, to blockade or attack autonomous Catalonia, where President Manuel Azana already has laid the groundwork for government headquarters, should Madrid fall.

The Spanish embassy spokesman, warning the civil war on the Iberian Peninsula might at any moment break out into a grave international conflict, said the information came from "an absolutely trustworthy source."

Eight submarines, he contended, have been painted with the red and gold colors of the Spanish insurgents at Gaeta, which is 40 miles northwest of Naples.

"We do not know what pretext will be used to put the fleet into action," said the spokesman, "but our information is that the action will start within a week."

The Spanish spokesman also reiterated previous charges Italy had landed a large number of troops on the Balearic Island of Mallorca, which, he said, may be destined for use against Catalonia.

These troops, the spokesman charged, are supported by 112 Italian airplanes.

The first step in the campaign, he predicted, would be an attempted Italian blockade of the Catalonian coast to keep provisions from reaching Spanish government territory.

Canadian Indians Halt Work on Agent's Home

Caughnawaga, Quebec, Oct. 29 (Canadian Press).—Royal Canadian Mounted Police were ordered here today as 400 Indian residents of the Caughnawaga Reserve, 14 miles west of Montreal, stood guard over the excavation of a new residence for the agent of Indian affairs.

The Iroquois, contending they already have surrendered too much land to the government, refused to allow workmen to resume work on the lot bought by the public works department from Mike Deerhous, an Indian. The protest assembly was orderly.

U. S. Outfits Boat to Hunt Down Crustaceans, the Big Shrimps

The Bureau of Fisheries announced yesterday it is outfitting a 72-foot boat to find out what happens to big shrimp when they break up housekeeping for the winter. That the crustacean, favorite of epicures everywhere, minds his (or her) own business and wishes, Garbo-like, only to be left along does not enter into the calculations of the Bureau of Fisheries.

The Department of Commerce, through the aforesaid Bureau of Fisheries, is very curious to learn just where big shrimp go when leaves begin to fall. It's for the sake of science.

That is the reason this 72-foot vessel is getting ready to spy upon the creature's winter-time activities. It will carry fancy trawls and a mile of cable.

"With this equipment," proudly announced Commissioner Frank T. Bell, "she should be able to drag a shrimp trawl on the bottom in 120 feet of water, with a good chance of discovering the whereabouts of the shrimp."

The service's studious shrimp sleuths have been led to believe big shrimps spend this off season in the Gulf of Mexico. At various times stragglers have been found in the Gulf of Mexico. At various times stragglers have been found in the warm waters off the Louisiana coast.

Five years of research have produced evidence big shrimp migrate as much as 200 miles, not because it is fashionable to change addresses with the coming of a new season, but simply to find more comfortable stamping grounds. This is assuming, of course, that shrimp stamp.

It will be the task of the Pelican—that is the name of the 72-foot boat with special trawls and a mile of cable—to track Mr. and Mrs. Big Shrimp to their hiding places. Already, it was rumored here yesterday, word has gone out along the fish grapevine for the quarry to be en garde.

Allen Gives Landon Two States In Post Presidential Contest

Maine, Vermont Assigned to Kansan; Says Gratitude Will Swing Other States for President Roosevelt in Election.

District Commissioner George E. Allen, Mississippi's political expert extraordinary, yesterday gazed into his crystal globe and predicted that Gov. Alf M. Landon will carry only two States Tuesday, Vermont and Maine.

Enrolling in The Washington Post's Presidential Poll, conducted in connection with the American Institute of Public Opinion, Allen gave 46 States to President Roosevelt without batting an eye or offering a reservation.

Explaining his prediction in a letter to The Post, he said:

"I believe Landon will carry only two States: Maine and Vermont.

"This conclusion is arrived at in a different manner than most political prophecies. I always have felt that the average American has a deep sense of gratitude, and I am confident that he feels Roosevelt has saved the country.

"I believe there are in the 46 States I have mentioned more of this type of average American than there are people who do not feel this way.

"The Two States which I give to Landon have been so traditionally Republican I doubt the President will get their electoral votes, although I am confident the popular vote will be close there.

"I always have had a great deal of respect for different polls. Frankly, I can't understand the Literary Digest poll this time, but the result of this election will show whether the Gallup method or the Literary Digest method is correct."

Mrs. Simpson Orders Costly Paris Wardrobe

that Edward VIII has never liked flashiness in clothes of women who have been in his company.

Mrs. Simpson almost inevitably dresses in black in the evening. She selected in her newest wardrobe a black crepe classic evening gown worn with a short bolero jacket of the same material. The gown is made with a low-cut decollete in the back. The bolero is edged with a band of pearl embroidery and the hem of the skirt is edged with the same costly material.

This gown is what is known as a double-duty dress and can serve as a cocktail or dinner dress when worn with the jacket that hides the cutaway back.

Mrs. Simpson added a new touch of color to her winter wardrobe by ordering a gay evening jacket of the sheerest gauze, striped with four or five different shades of red, her only concession to gayety.

London, Oct. 29 (AP).—There was not a single copy of American newspapers dated October 16, 17 and 18 for sale on the largest international newspaper stands in London tonight.

Those dates immediately followed upon the announcement of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's divorce suit.

It was also disclosed that four pages would be ripped from Time Magazine which appears on stands here Tuesday.

Newspaper stand proprietors declined to explain or discuss the lack of American newspapers.

Urges School Holiday.

A full day off from school to watch the coronation procession next May was promised to English boys and girls tonight by King Edward.

"His Majesty the King has expressed the hope his coronation may be marked by an extra holiday for the boys and girls of all schools," a message from Buckingham Palace said.

The "hope" amounts to a royal command dismissing schools on May 12, so the pupils will be able to watch the colorful procession as the King drives from the palace to Westminister Abbey to be crowned.

The announcement, indicating the ruler's active participation in coronation arrangements, was interpreted as dispelling rumors the date of the ceremony might be postponed.

King Edward previously was reported considering changing the coronation date until he married Mrs. Wallis Simpson, his American friend, whose divorce decree becomes final late in April.

Cummings Defends New Deal Spending

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 29 (AP).—Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said in a Democratic campaign speech tonight that the leadership of President Roosevelt "is needed along the upward path upon which America has again set her feet."

handlers or distributors was classified and minimum prices to be paid associations of producers and producers fixed, Justing Luhring pointed out. Provisions also were made for determination of uniform prices to be paid the producer and fixed time and methods of payment. The decision said:

"The question here is not an open one. It has been settled by the Supreme Court of the United States. Congress may not under the commerce clause regulate the production of milk or any other farm commodity."

Pointing out that the plaintiffs have contracted for the sale of their milk at certain definite prices, Justice Luhring held they would suffer injury under the AAA order "in that the prices they will receive for their milk will be less than the prices contracted for."

The ruling added:

"In considering the matter of an injunction pendente lite, the court must find that the order abrogates the contracts of these plaintiff producers and compels them to accept the terms of the order if they would dispose of their milk in the District of Columbia area.

"This deprives them of the right to freely contract for the sale of their product." The court further finds that the order with its classification and base-rating plan and price-fixing provisions, controls, or at least attempts to control, the production of milk in the States of Maryland and Virginia."

After citing United States Supreme Court decisions on the question of Federal production regulation of milk and other farm commodities, Justice Luhring quoted an opinion of Judge Brewster in the Federal District Court for Massachusetts in a similar case involving milk producers and a Federal order regulating milk handling in the greater Boston area. Judge Brewster was quoted:

"Finally, I conclude that it is not possible to wrest from the outlawed statute (AAA) separable provisions which can stand as a legislative enactment authorizing the orders involved in this suit."

Yesterday's injunction was granted after 12 independent dairymen in nearby Maryland and Virginia filed suit against Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

They claimed the agreement would give them less for their milk than they received under contracts with the Model Farms and Highland Farms dairies.

In commenting on existing contracts between the independent producers and their distributors, and citing the fact that the contracts call for "a certain definite price," Justice Luhring declared:

"This price is fixed and determined by the parties. The contracts are abrogated by the order. Furthermore, prices fixed by the order are not the same as those agreed upon. It is to be noted also that the power and authority to fix a minimum price for Class 2 milk is delegated to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association. A standing offer of this agency for Class 2 milk regulates the price of this milk.

Carried 600 Gallons.

The plane was loaded with 600 gallons of gas, enough to carry him 3,000 miles under favorable conditions.

With the weather report indicating he will find storms, low barometric pressure and sleet over mid ocean, Mollison said he planned to fly at 15,000 feet, at which elevation he expected it would be extremely cold.

En route here from New York his 750-horsepowered Pratt-Whitney Wasp motor did not maintain the speed originally calculated, but he considered it a satisfactory performance.

Mollison plans to take a short rest in London and then depart for Cape Town, which he hopes to reach a week hence. Although he has made three transatlantic flights from east to west, this is his first flight in the opposite direction.

He had first planned to take off yesterday as soon as he could refuel after arriving here from New York, but unfavorable weather forced him to remain over night.

The dinner clothes—now considerably rumpled after 32 hours of continuous wear—were donned, Mollison explained, to enable him to attend a party without delay upon his arrival in England.

Landon Sums Up Race Issues, Challenges Foe

tions, which he said were inseparable:

Does he favor reviving principles of NRA?

Does he favor reviving principles of AAA?

Does he favor concentrating more and more power in the hands of the Chief Executive?

Mentions of the President brought hearty "boos."

Holds NRA, AAA Inseparable.

"If he wants the AAA, he must have the NRA," said Landon. "If he wants the NRA, he must have the AAA. And both are impossible without increased powers for the Chief Executive."

Landon said "one day the President's son says NRA will be revived," and "the next day the President says it will not."

What, he asked, was the political creed of President Roosevelt and what were his proposals?

"No One Can Be Sure."

Landons' answer to this question, repeated so frequently in his speech that it became a refrain, which the audience repeated with him was:

"No one can be sure."

The Kansas Governor projected as "the underlying and fundamental issue of this campaign" the question "whether our American form of government is to be preserved."

This was anticipated in an unscheduled address by John D. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who received an ovation, and responded with an impromptu speech.

Hamilton referred to James A. Farley's jibe that the Republican chairman shouldn't "pick on him" because they were "both in the same racket."

"This isn't a racket," Hamilton shouted. "It is a fight to save the United States of America."

"It isn't the kind of racket that Jim understands. In it are 28,000,000 Americans who are going to return the American form of government by the election of Alfred M. Landon."

Before the Madison Square turning point of his Eastern tour, Gov. Landon took the radio late this evening to appeal for racial, religious and class tolerance, disavowing support of bigots, and warning the European scene will be re-enacted here if present Administration policies continue.

Indicts New Deal.

Later, in his Garden finale, Landon one by one read his indictments against the New Deal, contrasting promises and performances of President Roosevelt with his own campaign pledges.

Once again he assailed the Administration's farm program, and offered against it Government help to the farmer "within the limits of a balanced budget," and a "sound long-term program of conservation and land use."

He condemned monopoly and price fixing under NRA, and proposed instead of revival of NRA policies "to see that Government bureaucracy never again starts choking business," and anti-trust law strengthening and enforcement.

He declared that despite New Deal "boasts of recovery" there are as many people out of work as when the President took office, and proposed as its cure a "steady hand at the wheel" that would restore confidence and enable industry to put jobless to work.

As re-employment "cannot come overnight," he proposed in the meantime to provide adequate relief for those in need—relief "purged of politics." Once again he assailed the social security act as an "unworkable hodge-podge," and proposed to replace it with a "financially sound" program assuring necessary additional income to persons over 65.

Assails "Glorified" Spending.

And finally he attacked the $1,900,000,000 Federal pay roll, overlapping agencies, and spending of $9,000,000,000 in the year ending last June. He pledged himself to stop "glorified" spending and to balance the budget.

As to what the President will do on each of these issues, Landon repeated again and again, "no one can be sure."

"Here once again," the Kansan said, "I ask him to speak what is in his mind. It is his duty, not only as President, but also as an American, to tell us what his purposes and intentions really are."

In a radio prelude to the Madison Square Garden address, Landon again slapped at what he said were Democratic efforts to "divide" a united Nation by class appeals.

He charged leaders of the Democratic Party with responsibility for a "sinister" whispering campaign attempting to stir up racial prejudices, religious bigotries and class hatred, and said all of his ancestral traditions rebelled against it.

"If ever in this country there is an attempt to persecute any minority on grounds of race, religion or class, I will take my stand by the side of the minority," he said.

Gov. Landon went on the air to speak to his "fellow citizens of foreign birth" a few hours before he left for Madison Square Garden to summarize the campaign issues as he saw them in his final speech down East.

Earlier in the day he had motored to the home of the late Theodore Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill on Oyster Bay, to greet the widow of the "Bull Moose" leader he supported in 1912, and to lay a wreath on the grave of the former President.

En route out Long Island, little groups of adults and school children gathered to cheer him, and twice the Republican candidate halted the procession to wave to them. He was the first Presidential candidate to enter Long Island County since Charles Evans Hughes spoke there in 1916.

Returning through Brooklyn to the St. George Hotel with Republican leaders for luncheon, he passed through lunch-hour throngs fringing the street. Swinging down Atlantic avenue in Brooklyn, his party was alternately cheered and booed. Landon made a brief speech at the hotel, in which he lauded the "courage" of the Jeffersonian Democrats who are supporting the Republican national ticket in this election.

Landon jested with the luncheon group and told one of his funny stories about a certain "Professor Rugwell" and his spending policies.

After lunch Gov. Landon stopped at Bellevue Hospital to call on a policeman injured in yesterday's welcoming demonstration, and later sent flowers to the hospital.

The Governor arose at 7 a. m. today and left Murray Hill Hotel headquarters, accompanied only by a plainclothes man, for a stroll on the sidewalks of New York. Apparently he was not recognized as he peered into shop windows and mingled with the early morning crowds.

Following the address tonight, the "Sunflower Special," bearing the Governor, was to swing southward and westward again at 12:20 a. m., over the Pennsylvania Railroad. In the yards at Washington his train will draw once again to an operating stop at 5:20 a. m. tomorrow and remain there until 6:20 a. m.

His first scheduled speech tomorrow will be in the auditorium at Charleston, W. Va., at 5:40 p. m. and at Huntington he will make a rear-platform talk. Saturday night he will speak in the Municipal Auditorium at St. Louis before returning to Topeka.

Edward Corsi, former United States Commissioner of Immigration, who introduced Landon to his radio audience tonight, said the Governor's speech was addressed particularly to "the miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, textile workers in New England, shop and factory workers in our cities, sturdy tillers of the soil on the farms of America."

Taking tolerance as his theme, Landon said he "detested" what he called the "political" attempt to divide United States citizens "on racial and religious grounds."

He said he wanted no support from any elements that are trying to inject racial prejudice and religious bigotries in the campaign.

"I have never countenanced them in my own State," he said. "I fought the forces of bigotry in Kansas, helped to destroy them. I intend to fight them in the United States whenever and wherever they may appear."

Final Vote Drive In Middle West At Fever Pitch

All Parties Waging Furious Battle for Important Electoral Block.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—A final furious drive on all fronts today marked the struggle of major parties to win the Middle West's important block of electoral votes in the 1936 Presidential campaign.

At the same swift pace, minor party candidates for President swung along, and all factions spoke confidently of victory.

Aroused to an extraordinary pitch of feeling, voters in the heavily populated Lake States and the agricultural centers of the mid-country kept in step with the tempo. Not in years have they been so wrought up that they have expressed their feelings as they do now in the old-fashioned way of cheering, booing, waving flags and indulging in just plenty of plain hollering.

Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for Vice President, will wind up a long political trek with a speech in the International Amphitheater at the Chicago stockyards Saturday night.

Earl Browder, Communist Party candidate for President, whose speaking path has been strewn with obstacles recently, has scheduled a meeting for the evening of November 2 at the Chicago Stadium. The Communist ticket, however, has been ruled off the ballot in Illinois.

Territory Disputed.

John D. M. Hamilton, Republican chairman, has claimed that Gov. Alf M. Landon will sweep through the territory lying east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio River line, carrying Illinois, Indiana and Michigan. He likewise asserted Wisconsin will go Republican.

James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, has said that President Roosevelt will carry every State that he won in 1932 "and make some gains." The President captured all Middle Western States four years ago, including those historically and traditionally Republican.

Says John Nystul, Union Party chieftain, of the chances of Congressman William Lemke, its Presidential candidate: "We're going places. We are not going to run a poor third. We'll cut a big swath."

He predicted Lemke will carry Illinois, and asserted the Union Party will determine the outcome in Ohio and Michigan. He said he based his hopes for Illinois on the State ticket headed for Governor by William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, which has given him a good deal more campaign workers than he has been able to muster in other States.

"The chances in the Middle West," said Nystul, "are very, very good."

Knox to Climax Drive.

Col. Knox's Saturday address in Chicago will climax the last-minute drive of Republicans to swing the State back to the G. O. P. column November 3. Democrats have been no less active. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins spoke tonight in Chicago and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is winding up an 11-day tour that began October 19, and included daily appearances in Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana and Illinois.

Lemke was in Indiana today for speeches at Evansville and New Albany. Friday, he will speak at Minneapolis and Rochester, Minn., and an address is scheduled for St. Cloud, Minn., Saturday; then he heads into the Dakotas.

Col. Knox had planned several stops in Michigan this week, but canceled them for a swing through Indiana. There was no statement to indicate whether this showed Republicans looked with greater confidence to the result in Michigan.

Leaders Are Puzzled.

In all States of the middle section of the country, intrastate issues have complicated the efforts of political leaders to chart the possible course of voting.

In Minnesota, the effect of withdrawal of Democratic candidates so there could be a Farmer-Labor-Democratic solidifying of forces for President Roosevelt caused wide speculation. Wisconsin's Progressive Party of the La Follettes is on record for Roosevelt, with Gov. Phillip F. La Follette, seeking re-election on that ticket, espousing the Roosevelt cause.

The effect of the National Administration's farm policies on the vote in Iowa, normally Republican, is an engrossing subject for speculation. Roosevelt carried Iowa in 1932 by 185,000.

Nebraska, with seven electoral votes, is another State where conditions are considered puzzling. There, the President has endorsed Senator George W. Norris, chosen as a Republican for years. He is seeking re-election this year as an independent, having been placed in the field by petition. Norris is active for Roosevelt.

Belgium Chamber Votes For Independent Policy

Brussels, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Belgian policy of "independence without prewar neutrality" was approved by the Chamber today, 126 to 42. The negative votes were registered by the Fascist-inclined Rexists, Flemish Nationalists and Communists.

Passage of Premier Paul Van Zeeland's announced policies was regarded as the first step toward adopting the proposed military bill increasing military service.

Reaction Goal Of Spain Revolt, Envoy Charges

Church Used as Cloak to Hide Fascist Intentions Los Rios Declares.

Declaring that behind the Spanish rebels' mask of Catholicism lurks the grimace of reaction, Don Fernando de los Rios, Spain's envoy to the United States, yesterday told a luncheon gathering at the Press Club that on the high altar of the Cathedral of Badajoz, Moors and foreign legionnaires recently perpetrated a group executions of those who were loyal to the Madrid government.

Denying that the rebel movement was nationalistic since "on one side fight Moors and Legionnaires commanded by Spanish officers; on the other side the popular militiamen, that is the Spanish people," Ambassador de los Rios discredited Gen. Franco's claim that he fights for the cross and charged the Fascist leaders "invoke Christianity" as a disguise for "political absolutism."

"How can it be possible," the Ambassador asked, "that the Christian or Catholic cause is represented by priests who are fighting at the front with hand grenades; and not by means of the spoken word or by persuasion?

Peace Cry Sounded.

"A few weeks ago, when a priest in Santiago de Galicia spoke from the pulpit in the Cathedral urging men to war, the archbishop broke the hush, crying out, 'slay no more, sons of mine; slay no more of your brothers in Christ.' This beautiful and noble attitude is the Catholic and Christian one, not the other."

Reminding his audience that in his country freedom of worship and the separation of Church and State did not date from 1776, but was born yesterday, the Spanish envoy disclosed that he was the author of the law in 1931 that, "inspired by respect for human spirituality" guaranteed freedom of worship for all.

Equally scorning the assertion that the rebel forces are fighting for a new system of social justice in Spain, the Ambassador declared:

"I love the Spanish people so much, the humble who toil in the factories and the fields, that if this were so I might be able to see in that social humanism the fulfillment of a historical Spanish need.

Assails Reaction.

How can one believe that this may be its purpose, when the social forces which support the rebel movement have been the very ones which, during the years when they were last in power, refused to found schools for the education of the people, refused to take measures toward public sanitation, failed to open libraries in towns and villages, and kept farm wages at the low level of 12 to 20 cents a day.

Stating that in a peculiarly favorable hour the old absolutist tradition, against which the American people arose, now returns with the intention of again subjugating the Nation and of annihilating democracy," Ambassador de los Rios declared that today, as in the sixteenth century and during the Napoleonic era, the destiny of history depends upon what happens in Spain, for within her is being unfolded "the first act of a drama of universal dimensions."

Reiterating his confidence in the outcome of the present civil strife, the Spanish envoy concluded by predicting final victory for the Popular Front government. Of this he is certain for two reasons: First, for "a realistic reason; because I know that the love of liberty is profoundly rooted in the heart of Spain.

"Second, because I believe in justice and in the cause of humanism."

Navy Changes Discussed Here By Capt. Allen

Junior Board of Commerce Hears Officer Relate Annapolis Trends.

Capt. Archer M. R. Allen, U. S. N., discussed changes in the Navy during the past generation in an address yesterday before the Junior Board of Commerce at its weekly luncheon at the Lee House.

Capt. Allen pointed out that the high caliber of enlisted men requires that officers who lead them be more highly trained and proficient than in the past. In discussing this matter, he outlined principles upon which the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, is operated in order to turn out men of the type desired.

Celebration of Navy Day by the Junior Board was one of many luncheons held throughout the United States by Junior Chambers of Commerce, under auspices of the Committee on National Defense of which Humphrey Daniel, of Washington, is a member.

Announcement was made to members that the Department of Commerce has selected membership of the Junior Board to preview a number of industrial motion pictures, and select the best ones by ballot. Pictures selected by members will be shown late in November in the Commerce auditorium in connection with the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Patent Office.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold

That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Landon, Mystery Town, Found; Means No Vote for Namesake

Railroad Siding With Sign Is Only Evidence of Md. 'City,' Sans Population or Polling Place; County Residents Fail to Recall Founder.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., Oct. 29.—While Landon, Md., was an undoubted reality, residents of Somerset County speculated today on how it received its name.

A signpost bears the name Landon but a newspaperman here said the post "marks nothing but a siding switch on the Pennsylvania Railroad's main line two or three miles south of Princess Anne, near Kings Creek."

"While residents of the specific neighborhood agree and declare the signpost on the railroad does say Landon, they cannot remember or explain the circumstances of its establishment," this newspaperman added. "They say they knew many Landings as a family name in this county (Somerset) but no Landons.

"My guess is that at one time mine props and timbers were loaded at the point and the siding switch was named after the timber operator, who very possibly was not a native here.

"Landon, Somerset County, then, as we know it—and not many of us knew it until it was mentioned in the papers—is simply a place in the fields near Kings Creek, on the railroad.

"Nobody has been found who claims residence there."

The town or railroad siding, whichever it actually is, was found when the State was canvassed for election oddities. It does not appear in the postal guide, as it has no postoffice, but some road maps show it.

Police Hunch Nets $1,000 in Auto Loot

A load of automobile accessories in a grocery truck aroused suspicions of two Fourth Precinct policemen early yestreday, who found their hunch was well founded.

Herbert Watson, colored, 28, of 79 N street northwest, was highly nervous and lacking an explanation as to where he procured the accessories when stopped by Policemen J. M. Bell and R. H. Best. They took him to the station house.

Later, the manager of the Firestone Service Station at Third street and Independence avenue southwest, reported $1,000 worth of goods stolen from the station. Watson, police said, will be charged with housebreaking.

Powers Question Japan's Airlines

Geneva, Oct. 29 (AP).—Authoritative quarters said today Japan may be questioned on its decision to organize airlines over a vast expanse of the South Pacific.

The decision to connect Japan with its far-flung mandated islands below the Equator, necessitating the construction of airdromes, was reported to the current meeting of the League of Nations mandate commission.

Although Japan has resigned from the League she has not relinquished her guardianship over some 1,400 former German islands under a mandate which prohibits the erection of fortifications or the establishment of military or naval bases on them.

Frisbey was found unconscious in a chair at the apartment Tuesday morning. He was badly beaten and died a short time later in Casualty Hospital. Police said yesterday Daughtridge admitted striking Frisbey with a brick during an argument over a girl friend.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

CHAPTER 25.

Flood's lawless nature and his infatuation for Harla did not quite explain his move. Flood was no fool, no gambler, but a coward who played safe, always. He had captured Harla for some reason connected with his own safety.

Within ten minutes one of the Dinokui men came hurrying toward the kozgee. Noel went to meet him. The Indian took him up to the pine drogue, into the pines; began pointing here and there on the needle carpet and talking excitedly.

Noel could not understand a word of the talk, and of the rapid gestures he understood only one, repeated many times; four fingers; four men in that party. To his eyes that needle carpet was a blank; he saw no tracks, no signs. But to the Indian's eyes . . . with unerring precision the man led him on and on, through a thicket of deerbush, around a clump of thorny devil's club, to the bank of the river; and there, under a broad sweeping old pine that overhung the water, the Dinokui pointed out a sign which Noel did see and understand. In the silty gravel, the marks of a sharp keeled canoe—one mark where the craft had been grounded and lifted back into the shadows; another mark where the canoe had been slid to water again.

For several minutes he stood there by the pine, looking at those far blue mountains and trying to shake off his daze. Flood's move had neatly spiked all his plans. He could not return to Manitou now and abandon Harla. He could not push his hunt against Flood; in fact, he dared not raise a hand against the man. Flood was holding a fearful club over him now—Harla's safety.

"Why, hell," he breathed, "there it is! He grabbed her in order to stop me. He was out and out panicky. He's going to use her as his guarantee of immunity. As long as he's got her he's safe, and he knows it. If I can't get her away from him I'm done, I'm washed up."

He knew that Flood would not keep her at that headquarters camp, but would whisk her away to some distant and secure hiding place. Just where he would take her—that question was as huge as this huge north. In that swift gray plane he could take her anywhere, to any of his secret camps—anywhere in the 2,000-mile length and breadth of the Three Rivers country.

With a swift estimate of time and distance he saw that he stood a good chance to free her if he worked fast. Flood's canoe party had not yet reached the moraine lake. The trip was 30 miles, upstream miles. A four paddle canoe would be 10 or 12 hours making the trip. A plane could make it in 20 minutes.

To splash Flood's outfit he would need help, rifle help. That was coming, this police detail—due at any time now. With two planes and half a dozen seasoned men he could fly up there, land on that camp unexpectedly and clean it out.

He hated to break this case open precipitantly, before he was fully armed with knowledge of Flood's background. Above all, he hated to run any risk of killing Flood. If Flood should die in a rifle battle, with his past unknown and his crimes unrevealed, he, too, might be apotheosized, like Frank Rocco, by that million headed, but thoughtless, "man in the street."

But if he failed to lead a party up there he would be betraying Harla. It was he who had brought her into these mountains, and, therefore, he was responsible for her. An innocent girl, caught in this pitiless battle between Flood and himself, she had suffered tragedy enough already.

It was high noon that day before the mounted detail came.

As Noel worked at the kozgee camp he heard the faint singing whine of two airplanes in the southeastern sky. A minute later Strap's red Belanca, followed by a large cabined biplane, swam in between two towering pinnacles and started the long glide into the basin.

On a raw edge after his all morning wait, Noel hurried up the river bank. The planes were hours overdue, hours later than he had reckoned on. By this time Flood's canoe party likely had reached the moraine lake.

The Bellanca spiraled down, alighted on the river and glided into the shallows. Without stopping the motor, Strap climbed down upon a float, ordered Thompkins to turn the plane around for an immediate take off, and came wading ashore, a letter in his hand.

"What's hit you, fellow?" Strap greeted. "You look sick."

Noel did not answer. He pointed at the letter. "That's for me, isn't it?"

"Why, how the devil did you know? Yes, it is. A bloke at Manitou—never saw the cuss before—gave it to me and said to hand it to you the minute I landed here. He talked like it was important. Better read it."

Noel took the letter. "Why're you swinging that Bellanca, Strap?"

"Got to hop back to the river on the hiyu quick and get down to Aklavik. They're prodding me down there. I'm under commission on that job, y'know."

As Noel slit the envelope of the letter the biplane came taxiing into the shadows. He paid no attention to it or to the men preparing to disembark. Frowning in bewilderment, he stared at the single sheet of paper which he had pulled from the envelope.

The note was 12 short lines of neatly printed characters. The lines were not divided into words; the sequence of letters made no sense; the note appeared a meaningless jumble.

"Must be some sort of code," he thought. And then he saw that it was written in the F-R code which he and Spencer and the ranking eight of the intelligence had used during the past year.

With a pencil stub and the back of the envelope he broke the cipher down and wrote out the message.

Here safety depends on what you do, and I'll be the judge. Don't lay her disappearance to me. Explain her disappearance any way you see fit.

At McMurray, on your way out of the north, find letter of further instructions. Follow them and no harm will come to her.

Noel read the note a second time, then tore the envelope into bits. The message, which he had expected, and which he had known was coming, told him little that he did not know already. He had interpreted Flood's move correctly. The man had seized Harla to make him drop the hunt and get out of the north altogether.

To Flood's pledge of safety for Harla he pinned no more faith than he had ever pinned to promises from such men as Flood. The man intended only to shake off a menace, not to release Harla. As a matter of fact, the man did not dare release her. After he had exploited that rich placer and faded entirely out of the dominion—if that was his intention—she might be released then. That would be months. Perhaps a whole year.

Strap broke into his thoughts. "I've seen people pull some weird boners, but you, Noel, you've pulled the prize boner of all my born days." He glanced at Constable Brannigan, who had just finished a good dinner and was sauntering down to meet the mounted detail. "What a pretty kittle of fish you've cooked up here. And you did it—you yourself."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

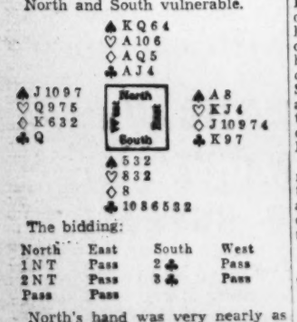
"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

The Sign-Off.

As a general rule a pass is the most emphatic indication of a weak hand. And in most cases when your partner has made some bid which is not forcing, you will be better off if you pass with a near-bust than if you increase the contract. But when your partner's bid has been one notrump, your hand may be too weak to pass. The "sign-off" is your method of improving the contract without getting into trouble. A typical case:

North, dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's hand was very nearly as strong as it possibly could be for an opening bid of one notrump. The substitution of the Jack of hearts for the ten, for example, would have made it advisable for North to open the bidding with one club with the expectation of making a jump bid in notrump at his next opportunity.

South's hand was pitifully weak. He had every reason to believe that his hand would be worthless to his partner at a notrump contract. Played at clubs, however, he could count on winning four tricks because of the long trumps. Since the average opening bid of one notrump shows about four honor-tricks, he could reasonably expect that his partner would win no more than five tricks at notrump. At clubs, he would win his partner's four honor-tricks and also his four club tricks. A contract of two clubs would therefore be safer than a contract of one notrump.

If his partner happened to be strong enough to rebid, South planned to go to three clubs to complete the "sign-off." The increase in the contract would be justified because his partner would have a stronger hand and could be counted upon to furnish one more trick.

North recognized the sign-off and abandoned all hope of playing the hand at a game contract. He realized that if South twice denied willingness to play the hand at notrump and twice failed to make a jump bid in a suit, his hand must be pitifully weak.

West opened the Jack of spades, dummy covered with the Queen and East won with the Ace. A spade return knocked out dummy's King. The Ace of clubs dropped West's Queen and the Jack of clubs was led.

East had no difficulty in seeing that the South hand could have but few entries. East therefore permitted the Jack of clubs to hold in the hope that South would not be able to enter his hand to take the diamond finesse.

When the Jack of clubs held, South did not blindly continue with the suit. The King of clubs, which was out against him, could be permitted to take a trick whenever East chose to play it. South had other work to do. A low spade was led from dummy and West won. He did the best that could be done for his side by leading a heart, but dummy's Ace won the trick and South re-entered his hand by ruffing a spade. The diamond finesse was then taken. When it proved successful South was able to discard a low heart and make his contract.

Had South failed to lead a third round of spades after the second trump trick he would have been unable to return to his hand for the diamond finesse before the opponents had cleaned up the heart suit.

Two Bandits Rob Filling Station

Two colored bandits today robbed Curtis Marston, 25, of 1708 T street southeast, night manager of a gasoline station at 1100 Thirteenth street northwest, of $8 and then strapped him to a soap dispenser in the washroom with his money belt.

Marston was freed by 12-year-old Wilbur Story, a newspaper carrier, who lives at 321 Eleventh street southwest. The boy said he discovered Marston when he went to make a delivery and heard shouts coming from the washroom.

Marston told police the men entered the station shortly before 5 a. m. One of the men threatened him with a pistol, took his money belt, and then bound him to a soap dispenser in the room. He was in the room about an hour before his benefactor arrived.

Elephant Steals $13.80.

Paris, Oct. 29 (AP).—Jean Blanc, Paris innkeeper, today complained to police that a circus elephant stole $13.80 from him. He said the elephant stuck its trunk into his pocket and gently removed his wallet containing 300 francs. The beast then swallowed the wallet. The police commissioner regretted he could not arrest the elephant.

Gen. Johnson Invades Kansas For Roosevelt

'Popular Government vs. Big Business' Issue of Race, He Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Arkansas City, Kans., Oct. 29.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, said tonight the "whole issue" of the Presidential campaign is "big business versus popular government" and that "the Tories have taken" Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Three epithets, "Reds, ruin and regimentation," he said in an address prepared for a Democratic rally, "are the whole Landon campaign."

Gen. Johnson said that in 1933 Landon was "so far beyond the New Deal that if the President had followed what he suggested, Rex Tugwell would have urged deporting Roosevelt as a Communist. But now look at your Western Progressive from our typical prairie State!"

Speaks at Wichita.

In a speech at Wichita earlier in the day Johnson said two years ago Landon "was the dizziest New Dealer in the whole menagerie," and declared:

"It's all right for a man to change his mind, but not to change his liver, lights and lungs, his wife, friends, family and religion without sufficient provocation."

Johnson recalled that in a Wichita speech about six months ago he attacked the Roosevelt Administration for excessive spending and urged the President not to follow "the Tugwells, Frankfurters and happy hot dogs who have attached themselves to his sturdy craft.

Says "Influences Eliminated."

"The President is conducting his own campaign. I believe these influences are eliminated. That was the purpose of my tour and my Wichita speech."

Johnson said he recently listened to talks by "Andy Mellon's Ogden Mills, the Liberty League's Al Smith, J. P. Morgan's John W. Davis, the Old Guard's Herbert Hoover, and the candidate from Kansas."

"Except for the oratorical manner, you couldn't tell 'em apart. * * *" he added.

"If Alf Landon can get so far from Kansas and so close to the Liberty League that you can't tell him from Herbert Hoover within four months after his nomination, where will he get within four months after his election? Why, he'll be setting up a branch White House at the corner of Broad and Wall, and it will cost $7 to send a postal card from Topeka to Washington.

Racket Rivalry Termed Factor In Bond Expose

Informed Sources Declare One Faction 'Squealed' in Prince Georges.

Warfare between two rival bondsmen, vieing for control of the lucrative business growing out of arrests for motor vehicle violations on the Washington - Baltimore boulevard over a period of years, was revealed by reputable sources yesterday to have been partly responsible for uncovering the Prince Georges County bonding racket.

These sources said that until about eight months ago, the majority of the business was handled by one bondsman.

About this time, it was stated, a newcomer who had previously confined his activities to a different section of the county, arrived on the scene. Offering a larger share of the "profits," he induced a number of the police to direct the "trade" in his direction.

His appearance, it was said, created a dissension that on one occasion resulted in his being ordered out of the Hyattsville station.

Employes of the deposed leader of the bonding racket were said to have been instructed to make certain "information" available to the investigators attempting to bring about an expose of the corrupt conditions. These instructions, it was said, were given secretly and without knowledge of attorneys for the Keystone Automobile Club, whose probe was successful in bringing the reports of "corrupt" practices under scrutiny of the grand jury.

A lull in the investigation is expected until Tuesday, when State's Attorney Alan Bowie has announced he will select a special investigator, as recommended by the grand jury, to aid him in probing police court records to check on statements contained in 80 affidavits submitted to Keystone attorneys.

One motorist reported yesterday to Keystone authorities that he had been forced to put up $100 as State's witness when he voluntarily offered to testify in connection with a fatal automobile accident which he witnessed on the Baltimore boulevard last August.

He said an officer and a justice of the peace had tried to induce him to get a bondsman, but he had insisted on leaving collateral, because he did not want to pay a fee "just for the use of a bondsman's name."

Court Orders Husband To Take Wife to Movies

New York, ct. 299 (AP).—Sam Rubenstein, Brooklyn necktie peddler, was ordered today to take his wife to the movies and hold her hand, just as he did when he was courting her. The order was issued by Magistrate Sylvester Sabbatino, before whom Mrs. Rubenstein had her husband haled on a charge of striking her.

The couple, who have two children, were told to return to court after the trip to the movies and Mrs. Rubenstein then wil tell the judge whether she wishes to press the charge.

Trade Treaties Bar 'Economic War,' Hull Says

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 29.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said tonight repeal of reciprocal trade treaties by the United States would "fling in the face of the world a general declaration of economic war."

"No matter how fervently he proclaims his desire for prosperity and peace, Gov. Landon's trade program would inevitably destroy the former and betray the latter," Hull said in an address prepared for delivery at a Democratic rally here.

In the speech, Hull said the Republican Presidential candidate was "pledged by the Cleveland platform and his own statements to a repeal of the trade agreements act."

"Economic warfare inevitably creates unemployment, privations and suffering within nations," Hull said. "The resulting distress is the most fertile breeding ground for military conflict."

Hull said one purpose of the 14 new reciprocal trade agreements of President Roosevelt's Administration was "to eliminate all factors which make for economic warfare as the most effective work that can be done for the cause of durable peace."

Cites Platform Plank.

The Cabinet member said Landon has announced he too would "engage in reciprocal trade negotiations," but Hull declared the Republican platform indicates plans to "deal with each individual nation on the basis of narrow and cut-throat, bi-lateral bargaining."

"The whole trend of international trade relations is today definitely in the direction of economic peace, rather than economic war," Hull said.

He said that if Landon were elected President and abrogated the new trade pacts, "that would take us straight back to the Smoot-Hawley tariff."

Denounces Tariff.

Denouncing this tariff as "the most important force that let loose upon us the holocaust of 1929-33," Hull said that under it "we curtailed our purchases from the world by $3,100,000,000 and we lost $3,600,000,000 worth of sales to the world."

Previously, in an interview, Secretary Hull said:

"The world must abandon the unsound policy of economic isolation," he said. "That policy is leading in only one direction. If there is not a military explosion within the next year or two, there will be an economic explosion, and the repercussions will hit us right in the nose."

Hull said that Europe had been "trying to cure the situation through political means, and it is going from bad to worse."

Pole Halts Motor After Crash With Envoy, Cleric Cars

Charged with leaving the scene of an accident and driving while drunk, Cyril A. Miller, 41, of the 3000 block of Wisconsin avenue northwest, was arrested yesterday and taken to the Third Precinct station house, where he was booked.

The arrest occurred near the Austrian Legation, in the 2300 block of Wisconsin avenue, where, according to police, Miller first crashed into a parked car belonging to Joseph Schöebel, secretary of the legation, then continued on, striking another parked car, belonging to Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of Washington Cathedral.

After the crash, police said, he drove away and smashed into a telephone pole, thus ending his wild ride.

Hearing the crash of the cars, attaches of the legation, police said, summoned authorities, who arrested Miller.

The Critical Faculty.

Only a small minority of our people are instinctively disposed to favor the critical attitude. And on the eve of a national election, when partisan feelings run high, and when feverish effort is made to identify a multitude of issues with the personalities of two men, analytical qualities of mind are all too apt to be sunk without trace.

Yet the critical attitude has been responsible, throughout history, for progress of every kind. We recognize the need for it in the development of all types of artistic undertaking. Every savant will likewise agree that no scientific theory deserves that name until it has stood up to, and successfully resisted, informed and objective criticism. There is no reason whatsoever to suppose that government, which should be treated both as an art and as a science, is going to improve unless it too is subjected to the most critical attention by its devotees.

Forty years go one of these devotees, a young Kansas editor named William Allen White, let loose a blast of criticism the memories of which linger to this day. It is said that his broadside entitled "What's the Matter With Kansas?" was more effective than any other document in the famous Bryan-McKinley campaign. With no ax to grind, with no objective but the truth as he saw it, with the critic's deep distaste for emotionalism, ballyhoo and pressure politics of every kind, youthful Mr. White struck while the iron was hot and thereby wrote his name into American history.

Forty years have not weakened either the sincerity or the intellectual integrity of William Allen White. In this campaign, like all who have the faculty of clear vision, he has not hesitated to denounce the "lot of errors and precious few hits" which the Roosevelt Administration has produced. But in the support which he has given to Gov. Landon he has never submerged his critical faculty. He could not do so, for any man, and still be William Allen White.

So it should occasion no surprise to learn that Mr. White, for all his friendship for the Republican leader, has indorsed the candidacy of Senator Norris, running for reelection in Nebraska as an independent, against both a regular Republican and a regular Democratic nominee. And that indorsement should mean more to Senator Norris, personally if not politically, than the one accorded him by President Roosevelt. For it comes from a critical as contrasted with an emotional mind; from one who is above the battle of party and interested only in the progress of democracy under aegis of good government.

Mr. White's commendation of Senator Norris, which in a narrow sense might be considered adverse to the Landon candidacy, contrasts strikingly with the argument presented on this page today by one of our correspondents. That lady, whose sincerity is unquestionable, believes that a newspaper should jettison its critical faculty and consciously subordinate its quest for truth during the period of the campaign.

Not by such tactics did William Allen White achieve the honor in which his profession, and the American public, rightly hold him.

Still Groping For A Policy.

No satisfaction can be found in President Roosevelt's references to housing in his New York speech. "We have not yet worked out an adequate answer to that problem," he said. This admission of failure on the part of the heterogeneous home-building experiments undertaken by the New Deal lays the groundwork for a change of policy. But neither President Roosevelt nor Gov. Landon has outlined a practical and comprehensive housing program.

One comment by the President raises doubt as to whether, even now, he understands why his housing program has bogged down. "We have not yet begun adequately to spend money," he said, "in order to help the families in the overcrowded sections of our cities to live as American citizens have a right to live." It was not a lack of money that brought the housing programs to a stalemate. It was the absence of any rational policy.

Tenants are now being admitted to the PWA's first low-cost dwellings in Atlanta. But the National Public Housing Conference finds that the "poor slum dweller is being pushed out the little end of the horn." These Techwood homes replace some of Atlanta's worst slums. But monthly rentals will amount to $23.67 for the average three-rooms up to $38.10 for the average six rooms, in spite of PWA's 45 per cent subsidy. So the new quarters are being let to clerks, salesmen, small business operators and other typical white-collar families. No one seems to know what has happened to the former Negro residents of this area. Presumably they have crowded into other slums.

Techwood thus offers a perfect illustration of what is wrong with the PWA housing policy. That agency is not using its heavy subsidies to rescue the lowest income groups from squalor and exposure. Rather it is competing destructively in a field which private industry can better serve, as the projects financed under the FHA guarantee plan have proved.

No substantial housing progress is likely to be made until the Government restricts its efforts to the rehousing of slum dwellers, in co-operation with municipalities, and encourages private enterprise to concentrate upon low-cost building for families above the border-line of charity. As yet the President has given no assurance that these first essentials will have his support.

A Furious Brawl.

Every American who favors some form of systematic protection against the hazards of old age and unemployment, as an alternative to doles and WPA jobs, must deeply regret the eleventh-hour emergence of the social security program as a flaming campaign issue.

The law, passed with the aid of Republican as well as Democratic votes, is not a partisan measure. Nor is it the type of legislation that can be given fair consideration toward the close of a heated political contest. A great deal of the hostile criticism has been superficial, irrelevant or deliberately misleading. Defenders of the act, on the other hand, are now disposed to close their eyes to the defects of the law, which is badly in need of revision.

The controversy over the reserve funds to be set aside for old-age pensions provides an outstanding illustration of the thoroughly emotional character of the current debate. The Republicans are solemnly warning workers that the pay-roll taxes are likely to be taken by Congress to cover deficits or finance pork-barrel raids on the Treasury. The President replies by denouncing the "contemptible, unpatriotic suggestion that some future Congress will steal these insurance funds for other purposes" and advises doubters to move to some other country if they have no confidence in their own.

Chairman Hamilton of the Republican National Committee adds to the clamor by challenging the President's assertion that the social security act establishes a trust fund protecting against Congressional inroads. Mr. Hamilton is right in stating that there is no mandatory trust fund provision, although Congress is authorized to establish such a fund and make annual appropriations for its upbuilding. Furthermore, it is clearly the intention of the law that reserves shall be accumulated and invested in interest-bearing Government securities, with a view to making the old-age insurance plan "self-sustaining."

It has been estimated that such a fund would amount to about $50,000,000,000 by 1980, as receipts from the pay-roll taxes would for many years exceed current pension outlays. The arrangement is based upon the fallacious assumption that the Government can reduce the burden of an insurance plan as would a private corporation by setting up reserves invested in its own securities. Of course such reserves are fictitious. The Government has to pay interest on the securities held in the reserve fund, and the taxpayer has to provide the money with which to meet the interest. In short, instead of worrying for fear Congress will lightly make away with the workers' pension fund, the Republicans should be calling for abolition of the reserve plan.

The Germans, with nearly 50 years' experience with old-age pensions, and the British with nearly as much experience behind them, have not accumulated huge reserves. The British maximum pension rates become payable at once, in fact, the cost being met out of employer-employe contributions, supplemented by government grants. As Mr. Landon has indicated, we should follow a similar practice, meeting the costs from year to year and reducing the scale of pay-roll levies and of benefits if the cost proves to be excessive. Such a procedure is not in the least inconsistent with maintenance of the principle of contributory insurance. Indeed, abolition of plans for building up a reserve fund would remove a serious and probably a fatal obstacle to success of the contributory system of insurance.

Obviously the Nation's buying power would be reduced by the accumulation of large sums left idle in reserves, with depressing effect upon industry. On the other hand, if these reserves were actively employed, the temptation to extravagant Government spending would be almost irresistible. We should face the fact that the people have to pay the cost of insuring themselves, whether their contributions go into the Treasury's general fund or into a special reserve, and discard the fiction that there is some miraculous device for lightening the burden.

If our political leaders would take time to study and explain problems of this sort, there would be less sound and fury and more chance for constructive revision of social security legislation based upon sound principles.

14-Cent Milk.

Justice Luhring has added a new legal obstacle to the numerous economic arguments against the proposed increase in Washington milk prices. Whether or not the higher courts uphold his contention that the milk marketing agreement is invalid under the Supreme Court's decision in the Hoosac Mills case, there now seems to be a good chance that the community will avoid the proposed burden on milk consumers.

New York's major distributors recently advanced the retail price of milk to 14 cents, but within a few weeks declining sales forced them to restore their previous price of 13 cents. This case is particularly interesting to Washingtonians, because the price rise followed an increase in the prices paid producers almost equivalent to that which AAA officials granted to local dairymen. After a brief experience with 14-cent milk, the major distributors concluded they would do better to absorb the larger costs of production on the farm.

In Washington the situation is not dissimilar. One milk retailing company has announced that it will continue to charge only 10 cents per quart, with a deposit on bottles. This milk meets all the high standards fixed by the District, but at present is available only in one chain of stores. Establishment of a consumers' co-operative is also being considered.

Other sources of supply could also be drawn upon. For example, Dr. Ruhland pointed out in his recent report to the Commissioners on milk that his department "has discovered in the Eastern Shore a very substantial supply, some of which is even now admitted to Washington, which is produced under conditions that conform entirely with the stipulations and requirements laid down in the District milk code." It is not improbable, therefore, that should the price be advanced it might work to the disadvantage of the local distributors as well as the public.

Ordinarily, of course, higher costs of production and a rise in wholesale prices must be reflected in larger costs to the consumer. In this case, however, the spread between wholesale and retail prices is already large. If the distributors operate with the same efficiency found in other cities they should be able to absorb a large part if not all of the increased cost. Local producers are paid 6.6 cents per quart and the milk is sold for 13 cents. But New York distributors pay 8 cents and sell for 13. Richmond distributors pay 7.8 cents and sell for 13. Philadelphia distributors buy at 6.5 and sell at 12 cents. In Boston the spread is between 6.4 and 12 cents, and Baltimore milk purchased at 5.7 cents is distributed for 12.

Certainly this record does not support the demand for a 1-cent increase in retail milk prices here even if a larger return should be granted to producers. Before Washington companies finally adopt that policy their reliance upon public good will should suggest an earnest effort to minimize unnecessary losses and to increase the revenue derived from that portion of their milk which goes into the manufacture of various commodities. The low price of milk used in ice cream, etc., compared to the high price of fluid milk distributed to homes seems entirely out of line. Certainly milk should not be taken out of the reach of families with limited budgets until every alternative adjustment has been tried.

Complicating Christmas.

Until the election is over few adults are going to give much thought to Christmas, not even those superior people who always do their shopping early. Nevertheless, references to the holiday are already creeping into print. Soon the December magazines will be out in full holly-and-snow regalia. And this week is witnessing a Christmas preview in New York City arranged by the Toy Manufacturers of the U. S. A., Inc. It is designed to help merchants make up their minds as to the toys they will stock and is a comforting reminder that others besides parents must face the problem of selection.

For the past several years, Santa Claus has been concentrating on stream-lined vehicles for Junior. It used to be enough that Dad should understand the mechanism of a simple steam engine. But now, in order to keep up with the younger generation, he has to be able to operate model airplanes, short-wave receivers, and electric-beam signal devices. Simple building blocks are out. Hobby horses are as alien to the nursery as real ones are to the city.

It begins to look as though the reflection of life's complexities in the toy world has gone too far. For dolls this year are to have decorative fingernails and wavable hair. It used to be enough to get enamel cracks patched and new heads put on when old ones were broken off. The modern doll will require a complete beauty parlor for her upkeep. It is too bad that Santa did not consult Mrs. Claus before he started complicating Christmas with anything as impermanent as permanent waves.

It's easy to tell when a person doesn't know what he's talking about. It takes him such a long time to explain it.

Another impossibility is to give as much as he wants to the person who doesn't deserve anything.

Political Shifts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It's too bad, dear editor, that Colby, Davis, Ely, Smith, et al. didn't take a walk in '32, and go sit with the Republicans, as by this time they would have worn out the Democratic seat of their Republican pants.

As time sheds stronger light on these personalities, we see they were never Democrats, but Republicans, in a Democratic role, for practical reasons.

Perhaps others like them will take a stroll in the next four years. If so, I hope they will not be too badly trampled by the heavy traffic in the other direction. H. H. PHILPOT.

Charity Begins At Home.

To the Editor of The Post—We have heard that the home for defective children, situated near Laurel, is one of the dreariest and most unattractive houses in the country. The authorities there say they keep the children clean, dry and fed—no money for anything else. Is it not true that the District people gave a ball and danced themselves tired to give money to Warm Springs, Ga.? Why not dance for charity at home?

Christ said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

A Plea For Biased Journalism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I congratulate you on your editorial in The Post of October 27, "In Reply to a Correspondent?" It showed a nice sense of the distinction between the two incidents.

I have been a Democratic reader of The Post for many years and have always read it with smug approval of its fair-mindedness and good sportsmanship in presenting both sides of the picture. I have, very gradually, during the past two years become an anti-New Deal Democrat and I am realizing for the first time what a dangerous thing good sportsmanship may be in a newspaper which should lead and inform public opinion. Unquestionably, in this campaign you have leaned over backward to give the New Deal the "breaks." I have heard New Dealers boast that because of the popularity of the New Deal with your readers you are "forced" in the interest of circulation, to give the New Deal more favorable publicity than you give its critics. Believing in the intellectual integrity of the owners and editors of The Post, I cannot think the matter of circulation enters into it. But I do believe that in this critical time, you should decide which is the "right" side and then throw the full weight of your influence to that side.

I was gratified both yesterday and today to find that Landon was given the best headlines and position on the front page. More frequently, it has been Roosevelt and news favorable to the New Deal that have had that advantage. For instance, when James P. Warburg announced his back-handed support of the New Deal, you reported it on the front page. But when Lewis Douglas who was, after all, a far more prominent New Dealer than Warburg, came out with a denunciation of the New Deal and a pledge to vote for Landon, the announcement was put on an inside page. That may be a good sportsmanship, but in the present national crisis, it is not the courageous, honest leadership that the country has a right to expect from a paper of The Post's standing.

I presume that you are against the New Deal and that you believe that, for the good of the country, the New Deal must be defeated next Tuesday. If you do believe that, then I think articles critical of Landon and Republican strategy should be suppressed—for the time being. I refer to such editorials as the one several days ago criticizing Landon's unfortunate foreign-policy speech. I refer also to the editorial Tuesday accusing the Republican National Committee of "inducing employers to disseminate misleading information about the new pay-roll taxes."

If you have proof that the Republican National Committee is inducing employers to disseminate misleading information, you are right, it is indefensible and my Democratic blood begins to boil. But—you don't need to defend the indefensible. You need only keep quiet.

Why bring it to the attention of the on-the-fence voters? Do you want to push them over into the New Deal pasture? And, after all, why was that tax made payable January 1 rather than earlier? So that the subsistence-level wage-earner who cannot afford to save for his old age, wouldn't wake up to the hardship and injustice the social security law in its present form will inflict upon him and his family—until it was too late for him to do anything about it at the polls. Why shouldn't employers remind their workers that the tax is coming and must be paid? That isn't misleading information, is it? And isn't much of what the New Dealers have written and said about the social security law misleading? Have they told the worker on the subsistence-level wage that he will get—after enforced saving over a period of years—much less in his old age than a vagrant who has never worked or saved? Misleading?

I wish you would write a few editorials on the dissemination of misleading information in Hopkins' statements and Ickes' speeches and, above all, in Roosevelt's speeches. Every speech the President makes is filled with deliberately misleading statements. I should like to see some paper with the courage to reply, item by item, to the President's speeches. His Worcester speech, for instance, was simply one misleading statement after another. To have printed each untruthful statement with the refutation immediately beneath it would have been the honest way to report his speech. Why cannot this be done with all his speeches between now and election day? They will be wide open for refutation and if not refuted, they will disseminate plenty of misinformation.

With so much in the New Deal about which to wax righteously indignant, why waste your editorial thunder on the few errors of the Republican campaign? After all, the important thing is the defeat of the New Deal.

As a Democrat, may I ask that in these last few days of the campaign, you give the "breaks" to the anti-New Deal crusade? Put the high lights of Landon's speeches and of other anti-New Dealers in boxes on the most advantageous place of your front page. People will read high lights when they won't wade through an entire speech. Report the President's speeches, of course, but do not feature them, unless you refute them, item by item. Dramatize events favorable to the anti-New Deal cause. Report, but do not dramatize events favorable to the New Deal.

Why not criticize, editorially, the alarming weakness of the social security law? The WPA scandals? The fantastic WPA salaries paid to officials? Why not editorialize on the coercion of voters? If you are looking for "indefensible electioneering" in this present election you can find so much more of it on the New Deal side that only a New Dealer could see past it to Republican misdeeds. I don't deny those misdeeds, but they are insignificant beside the crimes of a Government that uses taxpayers' money to buy an election.

Won't you assume a constructive leadership in these final days of the campaign? This is the most important election in the history of the country. To any honest Democrat, the defeat of Roosevelt is far more important than the presentation of both sides of a question.

I have not written this without any thought that any part of it might be used in your "Letters to the Editor" column. If anything from it should be used, please sign only my initials. My husband's position makes it unwise for me to broadcast my anti-New Deal sympathies.

Campaign Expenses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your suggestive editorial on "Campaign Financing" on October 17, upon the proposal of Senator Lonergan, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, that the Government should finance the Federal campaign expenses and forbid all contributions from any private or corporations is very illuminating.

Because the International Reform Federation believes that the proposal of Senator Lonergan would result in correcting very largely the chief enemy of representative government, we offered before the resolutions committees of the national Democratic and Republican conventions, and to the Union and Prohibition parties a plank providing that "Upon the recommendation of a joint committee, Congress shall appropriate an equal sum, from the Treasury of the United States, for the necessary campaign expenses of each of the major parties.

The chief value of such a law would be that it would free all members of Congress from all improper political pressure by their party leaders on the ground of obligation to enact certain legislation because of large gifts to the party by private individuals or corporations. The bill, of course, would not prohibit anyone from spending money for the election of certain individuals through the press, radio or motion picture.

View Of Mr. Tumulty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Joseph P. Tumulty speaks out in public, he insists on speaking for someone else rather than for himself. Why? Last year, in taking a whack at Father Coughlin, Mr. Tumulty professed to be speaking for all the good Catholics in the United States. He retracted quickly when some Catholics informed him that he was very much mistaken. In The Post of October 26 he is quoted as speaking for the friends of Al Smith.

No one knows better than Mr. Tumulty that Al Smith was not knifed by the Republican "poison of religious hatred," but by the treachery of bigoted Democrats plus the snobs of the same persuasion. Nor did Mr. Tumulty, a prominent Democrat, ever do very much to help Al Smith's cause. Why does he worry himself and the public at this late hour about Al's friends falling into bad company? The Roosevelt Administration to date hasn't paid much attention to Mr. Wilson's former secretary, but one never can tell about future plums in case of a Democratic success this fall. "Hope springs eternal."

Coronation Ceremony

THE main significance of the coronation ceremony in Westminster Abbey on May 12 next year is that by it the King is consecrated; is made "sacred," according to the old phraseology, and confirmed as elected prince.

In much of the ritual the old idea of election survives. Since Edward I (1272), English kings have dated their accession from the day of their predecessor's death, but theoretically the prince is the King-elect until his coronation. A vestige of the ancient ceremony of lifting a new ruler upon the shields of his warriors is seen in the lifting of the sovereign into his throne after he has been crowned. His position as King-elect is also indicated in the ceremony of recognition, with which the coronation begins.

In the ritual for the crowning of Richard II (1377), it was laid down that on the day before his coronation the King should ride bareheaded from the Tower of London to his palace at Westminster, "in suitable apparel, offering himself to be seen by the people." This custom was not abandoned until the coronation of James II in 1685.

On the morning of the coronation there was a procession from Westminster Hall to the abbey, which enabled the public to see the regalia carried in procession, a privilege now enjoyed only by those present in the abbey. George IV (1820) was the last king to take part in this pageant. The King now drives from Buckingham Palace to the abbey; the procession of the regalia is from the west door of the abbey to the "theater"—a raised, square platform that faces the sacrarium, at the junction of nave and transepts, on which the coronation chair is placed.

As the King walks up the nave the choir sings the anthem, "I was glad when they said unto me." When he arrives at the "chair of repose," which is to the right of the dais on which the coronation chair is set, he is presented to the congregation by the Archbishop of Canterbury with these words:

Sirs, I here present unto you King Edward, the annointed king of this realm; wherefore, all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?

At each of the four sides of the "theater" the question is repeated, the King turning south, west and north, and the people—led by the king's scholars and town boys of Westminster school—acclaiming him with shouts of "God save King Edward VIII."

The regalia having been placed upon the altar, the Litany is sung, followed by the first part of the Communion service. After the gospel for the day and the sermon the King takes the coronation oath and the ceremony of anointing is reached. The King is divested of his crimson robe, seats himself in the coronation chair, and is anointed on the crown of the head, on the breast and on the palms of his hands. During this ceremony he is concealed from the view of the spectators by a pall of cloth of gold which is held over him by four Knights of the Garter. Next comes his vesting with the colobium sindonis, or linen robe, and the supertunica of cloth of gold.

The King is now a consecrated sovereign and, in token thereof, the regalia is presented to him. He receives the spurs and sword, and after the sword has been offered at the altar and redeemed—for 100 shillings—the Dean of Westminster invests him with the armilla or stole and imperial mantle or dalmatic. The orb is placed in his right hand. He receives the ring and scepter, ensign of kingly power, and the rod with the dove, symbol of equity and mercy.

The supreme moment is reached when the dean brings from the altar the crown of St. Edward, which the archbishop "reverently putteth on the King's head." "At the sight whereof the people with loud and repeated shouts cry 'God save the King.'"

Now come the presentation of the Holy Bible and the benediction, after which the King is lifted into his throne by the prelates and peers around him. To the sovereign thus enthroned, the archbishop says:

Stand firm and hold fast the seat and state of royal and imperial dignity.

There is an interlude, in which the King receives the homage of the peers. He then lays aside his crown, offers his oblation "of bread and wine, an altar cloth and an ingot of gold," and makes his Communion.

At the conclusion of the Communion service the King walks to the Chapel of St. Edward the Confessor, where he is disrobed of his imperial mantle and assumes another robe of purple velvet. Then, wearing his crown and bearing in his right hand the scepter and in his left the orb, he proceeds to the west door of the Abbey, attended by the archbishops, bishops and peers.

In former times the newly crowned sovereign walked from the Abbey "with great glory" to Westminster Hall, where a banquet had been prepared. It was here that the King's champion appeared, mounted and in armor, and if any person gainsaid or denied the King to be the rightful heir—

"Here is his champion," cried Lancaster Herald, "who saith that he lieth and is a false traitor, being ready in person to combat with him and in this quarrel will venture his life against him on what day so ever he shall appoint."

That ceremony, however, has been abandoned and instead of walking to Westminster Hall, the King drives back in state to Buckingham Palace.

"Never Look Back."

SEVERAL TIMES of late your correspondent has held talk with melancholy prize-fight managers and heard them pine piteously for the good old days when the rich and socially exclusive society millionaires of Parke avenue were buying pugilists on the hoof and turning them over to professional master minds for training, feeding, advice counsel and discipline.

To be sure, those were happy days, and the memory is sweet indeed, but my mournful friends forget an important rule of foot-racing which every schoolboy learns the first day that he goes out for track. The first thing they teach a schoolboy runner is to pick them up and put them down with the utmost rapidity, and the next rule in the book is "Never look back."

No doubt it does warm the soul, if not the belly, of a hungry master mind rocking on his heels in the drafty doorway of a doughnut parlor to remember the time that Mr. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., paid $17,500 cash to Mr. Lew Burston for Rene de Vos, the Belgian middleweight. It seems too beautiful to have been true, for he was matched with Mr. Ace Hudkins at the time of the sale, and Mr. Burston, in addition to the sale price, collected his managerial portion of the $13,000 which De Vos received for fighting Hudkins.

• • • •

THAT NIGHT, after Rene de Vos had started his career under the proud crest of the Drexel Biddles with a glorious defeat in ten slashing rounds, Mr. Biddle served a collation in his honor at an exclusive society hotel which was by all odds the most sumptuous scoff-touch ever scored by the gentlemen of the profession. Mr. Biddle was proprietor of the hotel at the time, which is another way of saying he was stuck with it pending liquidation, and he broke out the fine linen and heavy silver for the occasion.

There was a faint reek of scandal for a few days regarding some silverware which seems to have become mislaid somehow, and several cases of wine, at prohibition prices, not accounted for in the checking. The exclusive society millionaires cast sinister glances at the members of our set, but there were quite a lot of bankers and Wall street brokers among the enemy, so we quickly took the play away from them and had them on the defensive at last reports. The police never found the silverware or the wine, but they were prowling Wall street, not Forty-ninth street, when the scent was lost.

MR. BIDDLE has now become Minister to Norway, and Mr. de Vos, knocked out by Angel Clivelle, who fought under very inferior social auspices, has withdrawn to his villa on the Mediterranean.

Our set at that time rejoiced also in the patronage of Mr. Walter Chrysler, the motor magnate, who paid $35,000 for Knute Hansen, who was promptly ironed out by Mr. K. O. Christner. And we were proud beyond enduring when Fainting Philip Scott, of London, was invited to train among the exclusive society millionaires at Palm Beach. Some said he was going to train at the home of Mr. Ned (Uncle Tom) Hutton, the old tax slave, but his manager, Mr. James J. Johnston, quickly squelched that.

"Our terms call for training at the Bath and Tennis Club," Mr. Johnston said. "If they want us in the home it will cost extra."

But there your correspondent goes, looking back to the good old days, contrary to Rule 2 in the book, when better days are now to hand and even better lie before.

• • • •

FOR LOOK YOU, gentlemen, to the zeal of Mr. Bowtie Bronson, who handled De Vos for Mr. Biddle. Does Mr. Bronson spend his hours looking back? On the contrary, Mr. Bronson has established relations with a new society millionaire and a richer and more exclusive one than Mr. Biddle.

Mr. Bronson now operates one Abe Simon for Mr. Jock Whitney, and Mr. Simon has won 14 out of 15 contests for him. True, the fifteenth was the one he lost, and he didn't look too charming, all 250 pounds of him, in defeat at the hands of a 190-pounder. But that is past, and Mr. Bronson looks constantly forward to other gladiators and other society millionaires.

You think, gentlemen, that Mr. Biddle, Mr. Chrysler, Mr. Matt Brush, the society brakeman, and those millionaires were hot? Then what would you think of those Donahue boys, James and Woolly, of the night club scion set, and young Leeds, who lives on a yacht, and Jimmy Cromwell, who married Doris Duke?

"My goodness sake," said Mr. Bronson, "life just goes on and on. There are always new millionaires, and these new ones know nothing about earning. They never had any practice. Spending is all they know. It makes me very impatient to hear about the good old days."

Birthday of Keats

By William Lyon Phelps

Author of "Endymion."

John Keats, one of the greatest poets in the world, was born October 29, 1795, and died when he was only 25 years old. As a boy, he was in no way remarkable; his genius ripened rather later, which left him only a trifle over two years to produce great poetry. In those two years, hampered by poverty, neglect, ill-health, and various other difficulties, he wrote enough poems to place his name among the leading poets of all time. It would be ridiculous to call these poems promising; they are finished masterpieces.

• • • •

The character and personality of Keats are revealed in his letters; and a new edition of these has appeared this very year, edited by Forman and published by the Oxford University Press, New York.

No one can read these letters without seeing how steady was his intellectual advance; in that respect they are very remarkable.

It is also true that perhaps no other poet was ever so accurate a judge of himself, of the worth of his writings, and of the progress he made. He knew exactly where he stood. The Preface to his first long poem, "Endymion," is a striking illustration of the psycho-analysis of adolescence, all the more striking because the psychiatrist and the patient and the poet are all three the same man: Keats wrote,

• • • • •

"The imagination of a boy is healthy, and the mature imagination of a man is healthy; but there is a space of life between, in which the soul is in a ferment, the character undecided, the way of life uncertain, the ambition thick-sighted; thence proceeds mawkishness, and all the thousand bitters which those men I speak of must necessarily taste in going over the following pages."

Later, he wrote in one of his letters, "I think I shall be among the English poets after my death." Amy Lowell's colossal Life of Keats is very useful. By consulting the index, one may find all that is known about any of his writings.

Jail Farm Coming

The agitation toward the establishment of a State jail farm to take the place of county jails in Connecticut, which is so strongly advocated by a group headed by Chief Justice Maltbie of the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors, fits in very closely with the general trend of opinion in the field.

This is clearly shown by the American Prison Association at its recent convention in Chicago. The association in speaking of the jail says it is "a completely discredited institution which must go if crime is to be checked where it first becomes apparent." Evidence and figures furnished by Judge Maltbie's group show that the jail is the training school where the first rudiments of further crime are picked up by young offenders.

Poland's Plight

Correspondent Denies Report That Warsaw Is Veering Toward Berlin; War Fears Force Poor Nation To Keep Costly Defenses.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Warsaw.

WITH A population of about 32,000,000, Poland keeps nearly 300,000 soldiers with the colors. About half of the country's total revenue goes to maintain and increase its armaments. This would be a heavy burden in a wealthy country, and Poland is desperately poor. There are sections where salt is a luxury. One is assured that in these poorer sections matches are carefully split into four parts and sold thus. It may not be true, but it is true that by comparison Americans do not know what poverty is.

An American here tells me he drove more than 500 miles recently without seeing a single automobile—and over roads that defied description. Some highways are being constructed, but all for military purposes. The few taxicabs in Warsaw are ancient, dilapidated vehicles which have to be cranked.

A better comprehension of the situation is given by the fact that while the cost of living is in general about the same as in America, salaries and wages do not reach half the American average. A common laborer has about $25 per month, a governmental official has to rise fairly high before his salary exceeds $50 per month.

Poland No Menace To Peace Of Europe.

POLAND does not menace the peace of Europe. There are still some chauvinists here who declare that East Prussia and other territory must become a part of the republic, but they are much more vociferous than numerous, and not to be taken seriously. Despite the country's poverty, the heavy armaments burden must be carried. To the east and west lie powerful military states, each one alone capable of crushing it unless it has some ally. Memories of the partitioning of Poland among Russia, Prussia and Austria at the end of the eighteenth century, and of a century of oppression by Russia and in somewhat lesser degree by Prussia, are still vivid.

Poland has nonaggression treaties with most of her neighbors, all of them bilateral; she has consistently refused to enter into any multilateral agreements that might appear a part of any "encircling" policy. None of these treaties, of course, is of any but theoretical value. No one who knows history will dispute this statement.

But the undertaking with France, just now rectivated and strengthened, is of enduring value. Commentators on foreign politics from time to time talk about a weakening of the bonds between Poland and France and a consequent drift of Polish policy toward Germany. Not only are there no indications of this, but the exact contrary is true.

Relations between the Poles and French have for a century been close. After the unsuccessful Polish revolution of 1863 many Poles fled to France, and there have been many intermarriages in the highest circles. The Poles remember the manner in which Prussia tried to Germanize them. They remember that Germany's plan for "liberating" Poland in 1916 did not include German Poland.

Nazis Still Worry Leaders In Warsaw.

THEY ARE still troubled by Nazi activities. More than 100 men in Polish Upper Silesia will be placed on trial soon, charged with conspiring against the republic in the interests of Germany, and the Nazis are also busy in the Corridor—but one must not call it the Corridor here; it is Pomorze. However, I was told by an official of the provincial government in Katowice (Kattowitz) that these anti-Polish movements are steadily losing ground.

"For one thing," he said, "the flow of funds from Berlin is drying up. For another thing, many of our German-Polish citizens who at first were active in the movement have been eliminated because they refused to become Nazis. The movement is no longer serious or important."

But there is, of course, Danzig. The situation there was sufficiently full of unpleasant possibilities before Hitler came to power, and it is now much more disquieting. The violent language of the Nazi leaders at Nuremberg has disquieted not only Poland, but the whole continent as well, and brought the possibility of an attempt to establish a fait accompli much nearer.

"What would Poland do if Hitler should march into Danzig and occupy the Corridor?" I asked a high governmental official.

"We should have to fight," he responded laconically.

Such a move by the Third Reich would, of course, be an act of open aggression against Poland, the eventuality covered by the Franco-Polish treaty would be there, and that would mean a European war if France fulfilled her obligations. A short while ago no one expected any such move by Germany for a long time to come. It is not exactly expected now, but neither was the invasion of the Rhineland. And the ravings from Nuremberg are still echoing here.

Polish Minorities Remain Troublesome.

POLAND has a minority problem which remains troublesome. In part, it must be said, the difficulties in this connection are due to Poland's own unwise policies in her childhood stage. But the same can be said of almost every country in Europe that had racial minorities thrust upon it by the treaties following the World War. Everywhere an exaggerated nationalism clouded clear political thinking. It manifested—and still manifests—itself in many ways. One of the most beautiful buildings in Warsaw was a Russian church on what is now the Joseph Pilsudski Square. The Poles tore it down. The great majority of foreign travelers between Danzig and Warsaw are Germans, but the bill of fare in the dining cars is printed only in Polish and French.

Anti-Semitism, long strong in Poland, seems to be increasing. There are some 3,000,000 Jews here, or about 9 per cent of the whole population. Mainly, they are small tradesmen, and since the economic tendency is toward concentration in big business and trusts, their position grows steadily worse. There is no question of expelling them—the Poles are too intelligent to do that—but the emigration of the unassimilated Jews is facilitated. They enjoy, however, equal rights with all other citizens. Some months ago a mob assailed them in a Polish city, and the police did not intervene. I asked a high governmental official about this.

"The report is true," he said. "But there were only six policemen against a mob of hundreds, and they were helpless. The government is determined to prevent a recurrence of such attacks, and they will be prevented."

"Does the traditional fear of Russia still persist?" I asked.

"We have not thought much about it until the recent trobules there," he said. "Now it is difficult to estimate the situation. But we believe Russia does not want war."

"How about Hitler's Germany?"

"Hitler doesn't want war either."

"But doesn't he want things that cannot be obtained without war?"

"I think one can say so," we the answer. "There's the danger."

"Poland desires above all not to be drawn into any war," said the official. "We have done all in our power to be a good neighbor on every side. Relations with Czechoslovakia, for a time somewhat troubled, are now hearty. Col. Beck, our Foreign Minister, who, you tell me, is regarded abroad as strongly pro-German, was the first foreign minister to make an official visit to the Soviet government in Moscow."

The Poles allegedly do not expect war. But it would be more accurate to say that they hope there will be none. Like Europe in general, they are whistling as they pass the graveyard at night.

And over all is the shadow of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich. No matter what the statesmen of Europe say, they think of Germany first whenever one begins discussing the outlook for peace. Soviet Russia, also an unknown quantity, takes second place.

China Backs Plan To Stop Japanese

Shanghai (Friday), Oct. 30 (U.P.).—The Chinese government has approved a program to stem Japanese aggression, officials said today.

Points of the program included the following:

Opposition to Japanese interference in Chinese domestic questions, to illegal Japanese military activities in China, and to activities of the special affairs bureau of the Japanese army. China demands that the special affairs bureau be abolished, since it is an organ for espionage in China.

Rejection of Japan's claim to a special interest in North China.

The central government will send military units to Suiyuan Province to preserve that region from invasion by pro-Japanese bands of irregular troops.

Landon Abroad

An Editorial Review.

The Indianapolis Speech.

THOUGH HAVING repudiated its traditional support for the Democrats, the Baltimore Sun is still skeptical of the G. O. P. candidate for the Presidency, as is evidenced by its remarks on his recent address on foreign affairs. The paper said editorially, in part:

Gov. Landon is not much more enlightening than he was in his addresses on American agriculture and American trade relations with other countries. * * * The world is in a discouraging state, to be sure, but its plight will not be greatly alleviated by the Republican candidate's demand that America's part in establishing international order shall be confined to "good offices," offers of mediation and a defense equipment sufficient to make other nations afraid of us.

• • • •

QUITE OPPOSITE was the reaction of the Hartford Courant, a stanch champion for the Republican cause. Commenting on the same address, it remarked:

Gov. Landon did not attempt to outline in detail the policies that he would follow in foreign affairs, but he made plain the broad principles that would underlie them. Perhaps he disappointed many when he declared against participation in the League of Nations and in the Permanent Court of International Justice, but honest persons will admit that, in so doing, he only took account of the hard realities of the present situation. * * * The speech was not a complete resume of all the matters that might have been discussed. For example, Mr. Landon said nothing about the debts owed the United States by other nations, and he was silent about the policy that he would follow in the Pacific. Yet the speech covered enough ground to indicate that, although Mr. Landon pretends to no intimate knowledge of diplomacy, he would conduct the foreign relations of the United States in accordance with sound policy, and he would follow simple principles based on traditional attitudes. If any fears existed that, under Mr. Landon, the foreign policy of the United States would be ineptly handled in the present delicate situation abroad, the speech at Indianapolis should resolve them.

• • • •

DIFFERENT words, however, came from the ranks of the Democrats. Of these, the following from the columns of the Louisville Courier-Journal were representative:

A little bit of Father Coughlin, a good deal of Hearst and altogether too much of Alfred M. Landon, marks the exposition of views on international affairs. It must be said only that he has not descended to the slapstick radio vaudeville his other ally, Al Smith, indulged in an hour later on Saturday night. On the whole, however, that wily and wicked capitalizer on human frailty—Mars—got only a featherweight challenge. If Gov. Landon, by his Indianapolis speech, sought to allay the reported disquiet among business leaders concerning how a President Landon might deal with an international crisis, their reactions, as they sat at their receiving sets, must have been most interesting. This was his opportunity to emerge, as his strategists undoubtedly viewed, as a world statesman. About all that he really did, in the Courier-Journal's modest opinion, was to wave a wilted sunflower at the war gods.

• • • •

MORE TEMPERATE but scarcely less critical was the comment of the independent Democratic New York Times, which declared:

As a substitute for the League and World Court, Gov. Landon turns hopefully to mediation and arbitration. He thinks it possible that we might persuade other nations to agree to arbitrate disputes. But they will not have forgotten, even if Gov. Landon has, what happened under President Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft. Both of them tried to push through treaties providing for universal arbitration, but the American Senate ratified them only in so emasculated a form that they were worthless. If Mr. Landon, should he be elected President, were to seek to revive that discarded project, he would be in the position of trying to flog a dead horse along the road. Gov. Landon's Indianapolis address may fall in sufficiently well with the prevailing mood of the American people, now more intensely nationalistic than ever before. His amiable words about always striving for peace and keeping the country forever out of war may fall soothingly on many ears. But a braver and more statesmanlike policy must be worked out by someone if we are really to play our part in the affairs of the world, and not settle back into complete aloofness in the mistaken notion that we can live comfortably off our own fat.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Music Industry Gets a Czar.

Now the hi-di-ho or music industry has a czar like baseball and the movies.

• • • •

It will be his job to coordinate the industry, harmonize the various influences and raise the standard of ethics so a composer will know a good hit when he steals it.

• • • •

The dictator of the music industry is Joseph V. McKee, one-time acting mayor of New York. Mr. McKee had his troubles in politics, but, the music business being what it is, Joseph will probably wind up under the piano wishing he had taken up a career in some relatively peaceful business like the Spanish revolution.

• • • •

Mr. McKee plays no musical instrument. But he figures he can swing a piano stool with suitable force as soon as he masters the right grip.

• • • •

He says he regards music as one of the necessary commodities of the nation. But he won't go that far in describing the lyrics.

• • • •

"It affects the home life of every individual," says the new czar of Tin Pan Alley, "and is as universal in its need as air and water." The judge understates the case. You can shut off the water and plug up the windows in any American home without disturbing anybody. But just try shutting off the radio!

• • • •

"Commercially," Mr. McKee continues, "music is the red corpuscle in the life stream of many business enterprises not directly in the musical field."

• • • •

Think what it means to the restaurant business alone! Without music there would be no big restaurants. Without restaurants there would be no tomato juice cocktails. Without tomato juice cocktails there would be no dry cleaning industry.

• • • •

It is an alarming thought. Those long-haired boys you see pounding on the pianos with one finger, frenziedly putting down notes and muttering "The skies above smile on my love" are just red corpuscle builders.

• • • •

And every little phrase like "Beneath the moon one day in June we played a tune" is just another bucket in the life stream of industry.

• • • •

Business must have its red corpuscles, even if it gets them from flute, saxophone and zither. Good luck, Joe; take keer yerself.

Eleanor Holm Jarrett is going into the movies. Possibly in a picture version of "What Avery Woman Knows." Or perhaps in a new one to be called "Swim, Baby, Swim."

Speaking of movie titles, they say a picture written around the Simpson divorce will be called, "The Unimportance of Being Ernest."

Business must be very good. They have stopped talking about extra dividends and are beginning to pay the back ones.

Text of Landon Talk in Madison Square Garden

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—The text of the address by Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee for President, in Madison Square Garden tonight, follows:

We are drawing to the end of a great campaign—a campaign that transcends all party lines. Tonight I am here, not alone as the representative of a great party; I am here as the representative of a great cause—a cause in which millions of my fellow citizens are joined—a cause in which Democrats, Independents, and Republicans are fighting shoulder to shoulder.

Let me begin by re-stating the basic principles of my political creed.

I believe in our constitutional form of government—a government established by the people, responsible to the people, and alterable only in accordance with the will of the people.

I believe in our indivisible union of indestructible States.

I believe in the American system of free enterprise, regulated by law.

Reaffirms Beliefs.

I believe in the rights of minorities as protected by the Constitution.

I believe in the liberties secured by the Bill of Rights and in their maintenance as the best protection against bigotry and all intolerance, whether of race, color or creed.

I believe in an independent Supreme Court and judiciary secure from executive or legislative invasion.

I believe that in the future, as in the past, the hopes of our people can best be realized by following the American way of life under the American Constitution.

I believe in the principles of civic righteousness exemplified by Theodore Roosevelt and I pledge myself to go forward along the trail he blazed.

In the light of this creed I have already outlined my stand on the chief issues of the campaign. Tonight I am going to review my position and contrast it with that of my opponent.

It is fitting that I should start with the problem of agriculture. Your City of New York is the greatest market for farm products in the country. As consumers you want an ample supply of food at fair prices. As wage earners you need the buying power of a prosperous farm population.

Stand on Farm Problem.

The welfare of agriculture is also the welfare of industry. A fair adjustment between the two is not a matter of politics, it is a matter of national necessity.

Now let us look at the record.

In direct defiance of the 1932 Democratic platform, which condemned the unsound policy of crop restriction, the triple A was enacted. The triple A restricted agricultural production by 36,000,000 acres.

This Administration has rewarded scarcity and penalized plenty. Not only has it failed to correct the basic ills of agriculture, it has added to them. I am from a great agricultural State and I know.

I know how this program dislocated our agricultural system. I know, for instance, that almost overnight, it forced the Southern farmer out of cotton into crops competing with the North and West. It led him into dairy farming and the raising of livestock. This affected not only the farmer of the North and West. It also affected the farmer of the South, who lost a large part of his cotton export market.

Luckily for this Administration the full damage of its program has been hidden by the droughts.

Agriculture Called Victim.

Government has a moral obligation to help repair the damage caused to the farmer by this Administration's destructive experiments. Farming, by its very nature, cannot readjust itself as rapidly as industry to the after effects of economic planning. During the period of readjustment, and until foreign markets are reopened, the Government must help the farmer.

We can do this without violating the Constitution. We can do this without imposing such burdens as the processing tax upon the consumer. We can do this within the limits of a balanced budget. And don't forget I am going to balance the budget.

The Republican Party also proposes a sound long-term program of conservation and land use. This is the only permanent solution of the farm problem and is essential to the preservation of the Nation's land resources. We propose to stop muddling and meddling and to begin mending.

And what does the President mean to do for agriculture? Is he going to continue the policy of scarcity?

Now let us turn to industry. What was the basic declaration of the Democratic platform of 1932? It was that the antitrust laws—the laws protecting the little fellow from monopoly—should be strengthened and enforced.

NRA Scored.

And what did the Administration do? It created the NRA. This law gave the sanction of Government to private monopoly. It indorsed the vicious policy of price fixing. It disregarded the interest of 130,000,000 Americans as consumers. It attempted to tell every business man, large and small, how to run his business.

The NRA was the direct opposite of the American system of free competition. It was an attempt to supplant American initiative with Washington dictation. And what happened? Monopolies prospered and a little New Jersey pants presser went to jail.

I am against private monopoly. I am against monopolistic practices. I am against the monopoly of an all-powerful central Government. And while I am President I intend to see that the antitrust laws are strengthened and enforced without fear or favor.

I intend to see that Government bureaucracy never again starts choking business. I intend to see that American initiative has a chance to give jobs to American workers. And I intend to broaden the market for American products by encouraging freer interchange of goods in world trade.

And what program does the President propose for industry? He pays tribute to free initiative at Chicago on a Wednesday and to planned economy at Detroit on a Thursday. One day the President's son says the NRA will be revived. The next day the President's son says it will not. When the President was asked about NRA last Tuesday in a press conference, he said: "You pay your money and you take your choice." What does he mean?

Uncertainty Stressed.

Growing out of the troubles of agriculture and industry is the intensely human problem of unemployment. What is the record on this?

In 1932 the President said that 11,000,000 Americans were looking for work. Today, according to the American Federation of Labor, there are still 11,000,000 Americans looking for work. Yet the President boasts of recovery—in one city in terms of a baseball game and in another city in terms of a patient he has cured.

These fellow citizens of ours can and will be re-employed. There is no need for one-fifth of our working population to be condemned to live in an economic world apart. There is work to be done in this country—more than enough to give jobs to all the unemployed. This work will start just as soon as uncertainty in Government policies is replaced by confidence.

"There can be no confidence when the Government is proud of spending more than it takes in.

There can be no confidence when the Government creates uncertainty about the value of money.

All Confidence Shaken.

There can be no confidence when the Government threatens to control every detail of our economic life.

There can be no confidence when the Government proclaims that the way to have more is to produce less.

In short, there can be no confidence while this Administration remains in power.

As Chief Executive, I intend to follow a course that will restore confidence.

I intend in the task of reconboard on the policies of my Administration.

I intend in the taskof reconstruction to make use of the best talent available, irrespective of party.

I intend to throw out all plans based on scarcity.

I intend to put an end to this Administration's policy of "try anything once." The time has come for a steady hand at the wheel.

And what does the President propose to restore confidence? Another "breathing spell?"

Relief Pledged.

Of course, re-employment can not come overnight. In the meantime, those in need must have relief. Consider the Administration's record here.

The Democratic platform in 1932 condemned the "improper and excessive use of money in political activities."

In defiance of this pledge we have an outrageous use of public money for political purposes. Public funds appropriated for relief have been used in an attempt to buy the votes of our less fortunate citizens. But it will not do them any good. The votes of the American people are not for sale.

As Chief Executive I intend to see that relief is purged of politics. There is ample money in this country to take care of those in need. When I am President they will be taken care of. This is the plain will of the American people.

And what does the President propose to do about relief? How does he propose to free the victims of the depression from political exploitation?

In a highly industrialized society we must provide for the protection of the aged.

The present Administration claims it has done this through its social security act. But the act does not give security. It is based upon a conception that is fundamentally wrong. It assumes that the American people are so improvident that they must be compelled to save by a paternal Government.

Warns of Tax.

Beginning next January 1, workers, no matter how small their wages, will have their pay docked for the purpose of building up a phantom reserve fund—a fund that any future Congress can spend any time it see fit and for any purpose it sees fit.

I cannot understand how any Administration would dare to perpetrate such a fraud upon our workers.

The Republican Party proposes to replace this unworkable hodgepodge by a plan that is honest, fair and financially sound. We propose that the funds for security payments shall be provided as we go along. We propose that they shall be obtained from a direct and specific tax widely distributed. We propose that all American citizens over 65 shall receive whatever additional income is necessary to keep them from need.

I repeat: The workers will start to pay for the present plan next January 1. They will pay as wage earners through a direct deduction from their pay. They will pay both as wage earners and consumers through the tax levied on their employers' pay rolls. And don't let anyone tell you otherwise. Even the Democratic attorney general of New York admits this. Last March, before the New York Court of Appeals, he said that a tax of employers' pay rolls, although levied on the employer will be—and I quote—"shifted either to wage earners or consumers, or both."

And what does the President propose to do about these taxes? Is he going to continue a plan that takes money from workers without any assurance that they will get back what they put in?

Answer Hidden.

Since the NRA was declared unconstitutional there has been some improvement in business.

But there has been no reduction in the total of Government spending. In the year ending last June the Federal Government spent nearly nine billion dollars. This is an all-time peace-time high.

We will spend this year over $900,000,000 more for the ordinary routine expenditures of Government than in 1934. And we will spend $1,500,000,000 more for relief than in 1934.

Under this Administration 75 new agencies have been created. Two hundred and fifty thousand additional employes have been foisted on the taxpayers. The Federal payroll has reached the staggering sum of $1,500,000,000 a year.

As I said at Chicago, any one at all familiar with what has been going on could almost count on the fingers of one hand foolish experiments the Government could cut out and save at least a billion dollars any time it wanted to.

I pledge myself to put an end to extravagance and waste. I pledge myself to stop the policy that glorifies spending. I pledge myself to balance the budget.

And what is the President going to do? Is he going to stop his policy of spending for spending's sake?

See Nation Perilled.

I come finally to the underlying and fundamental issue of this campaign. This is the question of whether our American form of government is to be preserved.

Let us turn once more to the record.

The President has been responsible for nine acts declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

He has publicly urged Congress to pass a law, even though it had reasonable doubts as to its Constitutionality.

He has publicly belittled the Supreme Court of the United States.

He has publicly suggested that the Constitution is an outworn document.

He has retained in high office men outspoken in their contempt for the American form of government.

He has sponsored laws which have deprived States of their Constitutional rights.

Every one of these actions—and the list is by no means complete—strikes at the heart of the American form of government.

Our Constitution is not a lifeless piece of paper. It is the underlying law of the land and the charter of the liberties of our people. The people, and they alone, gave it life. The people, and they alone, have the right to amend or destroy it. Until the people in their combined wisdom decide to make the change, it is the plain duty of the people's servants to keep within the Constitution. It is the plain meaning of the oath of office that they shall keep within the Constitution.

Our Federal system allows great leeway. But if changes in our civilization make amendment to the Constitution desirable it should be amended. It has been amended in the past. It can be in the future.

Backs Constitution.

I have already made my position clear on this question. I am on record that if proper working conditions cannot be regulated by the States, I shall favor a Constitutional amendment giving the States the necessary powers.

And what are the intentions of the President with respect to the Constitution? Does he believe changes are required? If so, will an amendment be submitted to the people, or will be attempt to get around the Constitution by tampering with the Supreme Court.

We want more than a material recovery in this country. We want a moral and spiritual recovery as well. We have been allowing materials things to obscure the great religious and spiritual values. But life is more than bread. Character is the supreme thing. We have been weakening those very qualities upon which character is built. It would be tragedy if in our attempt to win prosperity we should lose our own souls. It

'WomanRebels' Casts Hepburn In Vivid Role

New Picture at Keith's Is Engaging Study of an Interesting Era.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"A WOMAN REBELS." RKO-Radio picturization of the novel, "Portrait of a Rebel," by Netta Syrett, adapted to the screen by Anthony Veiller and Ernest Vajda, costarring Katharine Hepburn and Herbert Marshall, with Elizabeth Allan, Donald Crisp, Doris Dudley, David Manners, Lucille Watson, Van Heflin, Margaret Seddon, Lionel Pape, Constance Lupino, Lillian Kemble-Cooper, Nick Thompson and Inez Pelanso. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, October 27.

Tracing the course of an independent young woman's revolt against the smug and stupid inhibitions of the mid-Victorian era in England, this engaging study in archaic customs and stilted manners pursues two avenues of dramatic development.

First, it presents with clarity and vigor the straight thinking and spirited action of Pamela Thistlewaite in emancipating herself from the strictures of a forbidding household and the conventionalities of a strait-laced and unbending society that forbade woman's participation in any activity outside the concerns of her immediate domestic establishment. Secondly, it depicts with no less vividness and forcefulness the romantic adventures of the girl whose heart led her along devious paths and precipitated a crisis in her life that lends the drama its greatest power.

These two ramifications of narrative and plot are skillfuly articulated into a rational and interesting story of a successful rebellion against social usages that seem strangely bigoted, narrow and unjustifiable in this day of free thinking and freer license for both sexes.

Enter the Iron Father.

The picture opens upon a scene that is vaguely reminiscent of the fireside tyranny of the elder Barrett in Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." A stern and iron-willed father occupying an important place in the judiciary, is upbraiding his two lovely daughters for misdemeanors that are wholly trivial. Flora is terrified by her father's anger; Pamela is merely resentful and defiant. Flora soon is wed; Pamela falls in love, but suffers the ignominy of unmarried motherhood. Her sister dies upon news of her seafaring husband's death and burial at sea and Pamela's baby is raised as Flora's unborn child—until events set the stage for an inevitable revelation of the deception that has been practiced through the years.

The story is developed amid scenes of such artistry as to lend it a dignity and power quite in keeping with the high plane upon which the fashioning of the picture has been held. There is nothing tawdry in the method by which this deeply sentimental and emotional subject has been translated to the screen. It is a thoughtful, visually beautiful and discreet utilization of a theme that might easily have been permitted to degenerate into a mere effusion of sex.

Miss Hepburn Is Dominant.

To the principal role in the play, Katharine Hepburn brings an incisive and dominant authority that lends rather more conviction to the sequences in which she overcomes business prejudices and secures herself a remunerative position in a man's workaday world than in those presumably more tender passages in which she is expected to be a doting mother, wrapped up in the protection and welfare of her baby daughter. Miss Hepburn, admirable actress that she is, like the late Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, possesses none of the gentle tenderness that brings warmth and believability to scenes of maternal devotion. If a case-hardened bachelor may be permitted to say so, she does not even know how to hold a baby. Otherwise her performance is perhaps the best she has done in recent months, barring, of course, the heroic item of Maxwell Anderson's "Mary of Scotland."

Herbert Marshall, in the costellar role of the ubiquitous lover, who finds it possible always to detach himself from the duties of the diplomatic service to be at Pamela's side when most needed, plays with his usual impeccable good taste and lack of enlivenment. Making her cinema debut, in so far as Washington is concerned, at least, Doris Dudley, daughter of Bide Dudley, a famous member of the Fourth Estate, makes a distinctly favorable impression in the role of Pamela's daughter grown to young womanhood, who finally learns the secret of her mother's life and her own. Lucille Watson, that splendid acrtess, who did so much to make Max Gordon's production of "Pride and Prejudice" the fine play it was, is perfectly cast as Betty, the confidante of both daughters, and Donald Crisp is an austere and thoroughly obnoxious father, whose stubborn shortsightedness starts all the trouble.

Support and Subsidiaries.

Van Heflin, as Pamela's first married suitor, plays on the screen with the same ease and disarming naturalness that he displayed at the National recently with Ina Claire in "End of Summer." David Manners also appears advantageously, if briefly, as the naval husband of Flora, impersonated with youthful charm by Elizabeth Allan, perhaps best remembered for her work with Clark Gable in the film version of "Men in White."

"A Woman Rebels" has been given a sumptuous production, the outdoor locals in Italy, where Pamela's baby is born, being of magnificent scenic beauty.

A short-reel subject, "Singing in the Air," and the Pathe News are the only auxiliaries of a feature that should exert a particularly strong appeal to feminine playgoers, whether mothers or not, although I suspect that the mothers will be the most deeply affected.

About the Showshops

THE formal dedication last night of the Warner Brothers' new Uptown Theater, on Connecticut avenue at Newark and Macomb streets, or vice versa, recalled to the veteran Washington theatergoer other theater openings that range back through the years farther than some of us care to specify.

BELL.

Last night's inaugural signalized the latest addition to the chain of theaters founded long ago by Harry M. Crandall when he opened a small airdome for the exhibition of motion pictures out on East Capitol street. That project finally expanded into a larger open air theater on North Capitol street and reached what everyone thought was full flower in the opening of that tremendously capacious temple of the titillating tintypes at the corner of Ninth and E streets, known for years as Crandall's Joy Theater. It occupied the present southeast corner site of Thompson's Restaurant and had a staggering seating capacity of approximately 300.

Out of those early beginnings has emerged the present circuit of Warner Brothers theaters in the Capital and surrounding territory, presided over by John J. Payette, general zone manager. Altogether Mr. Payette has under his jurisdiction, or will have soon, something like 45 picture houses of the better sort.

The first of the important openings of the Crandall theaters that this column had a finger in was the dedication of the Knickerbocker, with Barry Bulkley acting as master of ceremonies and a notable group of screen stars in attendance as honor guests. I recall with some vividness that the stellar spots on the elaborate dedicatory program were occupied by Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, then at the height of their popularity—and that popularity, I think, never has been exceeded—Carlyle Blackwell, Alice Brady and numerous others of the first flight in their day.

Alice Brady—the same Alice Brady who plays the scatter-brained wife in "My Man Godfrey," recently at RKO-Keith's—back in those old days was being hailed as one of the theater's most promising ingenues and was a screen star in World Pictures, of which her father, William A. Brady, was president. It is an odd coincidence that Bob Smeltzer, present Washington branch exchange manager for Warner Brothers-First National, then was serving in a similar capacity locally for World Pictures—or maybe the trade name was World Films.

The next most notable Crandall opening probably was that of the Tivoli Theater, at Fourteenth street and Park road, in April, 1923. There were present on that occasion not so many stage and screen stars, but a surprising number of the most influential figures in the motion picture industry in the East—Jules Mastbaum, John McGuirk and Abe Sablosky, president and vice presidents, respectively, of the Stanley Co. of America, later absorbed by the Warner Brothers after Mastbaum's sudden and untimely death; Sidney Franklin, then head of Paramount Theaters; Moe Mark, owner of the Strand Theater in New York, and other Manhattan and upstate theater properties; Si Fabian, New Jersey chain theater owner; Louis J. Selznick, producer of Select Pictures and father of the David Selznick, now active as a producer on the West Coast with such hits as "David Copperfield," "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and many others to his credit; Sidney Kent, then of Paramount; William Fox and goodness only knows how many others of equal rating.

Following the initial performance at the Tivoli, then, and still, the largest and most representative of the Capital's residential picture houses, all of these celebrities were entertained at a gay rout in the home of Harry Crandall at Sixteenth and Buchanan streets—an imposing pile of ambassadorial proportions.

In those early days of the Tivoli, S. Barrett McCormick was production manager and staged as pretentious living spectacles as any of the downtown theaters had dared to present up to that time. Mr. McCormick now is in charge of Eastern publicity for RKO-Radio with offices in New York. He was last in Washington as personal escort of Ginger Rogers and her mother when they visited town briefly two or three seasons ago.

Then there were the out-of-town openings to which considerable junkets always journeyed when a new Crandall house was being dedicated. They included, among others, the opening of the Strand in Cumberland, Md., the Tivoli in Frederick, the Century in Petersburg, Va.; the Rialto in Roanoke, and the Apollo in Martinsburg, W. Va.

Finally, in September, 1927, simultaneously with the opening of the then Fox Theater on F street, the Crandall forces, amalgamated with the Stanley Co. of America, opened the Stanley Theater in Baltimore. That also was a notable evening attended by dignitaries from all parts of the country.

Building then languished until the erection of the Penn Theater in Southeast Washington last year. Now comes the Uptown and after that will be dedicated in turn the Sheridan and the Calvert to increase the local chain to 16 links.

It is all romantic and nostalgic and leads to the thought that the producers of that glorified documentary reel are right.

In all of the excitement of new theater openings, changes of bills in the downtown, first-run area and all the rest of the weekly hubbub of show business, it should not be forgotten that tonight and tomorrow night the newly organized Washington Civic Theater will make history by repeating their production of "Caesar and Cleopatra" in Wardman Park Theater. This is in accord with public demand and marks the first time, to the best of my knowledge and belief, that any local group ever has been compelled to repeat a play in the theater of the ample capacity of Wardman.

The Variety Club of Washington is holding a wide-open fete in its rooms in the Willard on election night. Election returns, of course, will be received unbrokenly throughout the evening and the whole affair is "on the house"—free beer, free sandwiches and freedom of speech, no matter which side you're on. The goings-on are announced for the period from 9 p. m. and ? Which ought to be long enough.

Out-on-the-Limb-Again Note.

Personally, having no vote except of the Rialto's and Shoreham's straw variety, my well-considered predilection seems to be for Roosedon and Lanvelt. May the best man win is what I always say.

The 'Informer' Organizes His Private Army

Victor McLaglen Adds Air Force to Private Unit; a Beauty Sleeps Out.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Jutting-jawed Victor McLaglen, No. 1 Hollywood Boy Scout, has added an air force to his private army, but says it's all for fun.

With addition of the flying wing McLaglen forces now number about 600 men and women in some of the gaudiest uniforms seen since the Battle of Waterloo.

"It's just for fun," explained Soldier Boy McLaglen. "I been soldiering all my life, and I still get a kick out of it. Same way with all the young fellows in my outfits—we love a parade."

"We got 125 aviators and 50 planes in the flying corps," beamed McLaglen. "The ships are privately owned, and they're all different kinds.

"The idea is to teach young men to fly, and we're really developing some pilots. One young fellow soloed after only two hours and a half of training.

"Of course, in time of war we could be counted on as a Government reserve," concluded McLaglen, "but if you write anything about this I wish you'd be sure to say we're a nonpolitical outfit.

"In peacetime we could be used only in emergencies—like in case the Communists tried to grab the Government."

John Beal flew off to New York posthaste when Helen Craig SOS'ed him to help coach her in her new play, and forgot he'd left his car parked on a side street near his hotel. Remembering at length he wired Joe Beal, (no relation) his secretary, to haul the heap to the garage. Joe found a girl asleep in it.

She confesed she was an out-of-work movie-struck lass, and had been sleeping in the car three days.

Sequel just goes to show how different real life is from a scenario. Beal's stage cue would have been to help her find a job where she'd have become a great star over night. As it was, she said: "So sorry. Goodbye," and Beal replied: "Don't mention it. Goodbye."

Gable Does a Dempsey on Screen

In "Cain and Mabel," the new screen play that opened the new Uptown Theater last night and begins a week's engagement at the Warner Brothers' Earle today, Clark Gable is cast as a prizefighter who does a considerable amount of shadow boxing with Marion Davies. It was in the making of this film that Gable knocked a professional pug cold as a herring. Coaching him over the ropes above are, left to right, William Collier, sr., and Allen Jenkins.

The Post's New Yorker

Manhattan Cocktail.

ENTERPRISE: Charles Gordon, who produced "Jarnegan," is very much excited these days. He has just decided to produce a dramatization of "Green Margins," October Book-of-the-Month. . . . Gordon feels that his play can't miss. It's about low-down farm folks whose inner thoughts will be translated to the audience via loudspeaker. In other words, he's combining "Tobacco Road" and O'Neill!

PERSEVERANCE: "Mimie Scheller," which opened recently, flopped last week. The stoic producers accepted their losses and are at work now producing their new play. They've changed the title of this new play—to "Let's Begin Again."

CHATTER: Marion Talley has taken the cue from Mary Lewis and will invade the night-club field. Miss Talley probably also will appear at the Versailles . . . the Du Ponts, anxious to get back into the movie film industry in combating the gigantic Eastman interests, have invested heavily in the newly formed Grand National Pictures . . . Simpson's, most famous tavern in London's Strand, is changing its name because of the publicity. The new name will be "The King's Arms."

ACCLAIM: Mr. Ellis Parker, sr., the rural detective involved in the Hauptmann aftermath, visited a Jersey night club Saturday night. The master of ceremonies, in his anxiety to introduce such a celebrity, announced to the patrons: "And now I'd like you to meet no other than—Ellis Parker Butler." . . . Parker arose, bowed and answered: "I've been accused of telling a lot of stories—but I hope not his."

AGE: A heckler interrupted the hoofing routine and asked: "How can you keep on going like that? . . . Bill shushed the orchestra and explained: "Every night when I come home I pour two quarts of gin into the bathtub, let the water run and soak my feet in it for three hours . . . Then when I get up my feet are drunk and dance all day" . . .

Jimmie Fidler In Hollywood

Hollywood, Oct. 29.

Unvarying comment of studio visitors (business men in particular) is that there is much apparent waste of man-power on sets. "Three or four men doing one man's work," a banker said to me one day, as if I could not see for myself. He regarded this as obvious evidence of inefficient studio management, and thousands more visitors no doubt have held the same opinion.

FRANCES LANGFORD.

But waste of man-power is actual economy. During production of a picture, "time" is the most valuable element; far more costly than labor. One electrician, for example, could easily operate a dozen studio lights surrounding a large set, but he would waste so much time walking from light to light that he would slow production perceptibly; costly minutes would be wasted.

• • • •

The average picture costs $250,000, requires 25 days to produce; sic, $10,000 a day, $1,250 an hour. Four electricians working on union scale can save a studio one hour a day, and four electricians cost less than $50. So the profit from seeming waste of man-power is about $1,200 a day, or $30,000 per picture. Any banker will admit this is sound business.

• • • •

If you have doubted my previously expressed opinion that Joan Crowford is serious about going on the stage, here is more conclusive proof. At her home last evening she showed me her massive library of play scripts. She and Franchot Tone have been collecting for three years, and now have secured scripts of every successful stage play produced in New York since 1906. The two of them act out principal parts in their own backyard theater.

• • • •

Frances Langford relays this story. It was told to Frances by her cook; it must be authentic. Of late neighbors on both sides have developed the habit of inviting friends to breakfast parties. Such affairs seem to have supplanted the usual evening events. Yesterday Miss Langford's cook learned the reason: Frances has a hibit of singing in her bath and while dressing every morning. Her neighbors invite their friends to breakfast with the assurance, "There will be private singing by Frances Langford in person."

Landon States His Convictions In N. Y. Address

would be an overwhelming disaster if we should forget that it is righteousness that exalteth a nation.

Forty-eight hours from tonight, standing where I am standing, there will be a President of the United States. He will be seeking re-election.

A little more than 48 hours after he has spoken, the American people will be streaming to the polls.

Demands Frankness.

—Here once again I ask him to speak what is in his mind. It is his duty, not only as President, but also as an American, to tell us what his purposes and intentions really are. It is his duty, as it is my duty, to trust the "combined wisdom of the people." For the Constitution, which he swore to uphold, stands squarely on the "combined wisdom of the people." When the ballot speaks, it speaks the "combined wisdom of the people."

The people of this country will not trust a man who does not trust them. If he trusts them he will answer the questions being asked from one end of the country to the other.

Does he favor reviving the principles of the national recovery act? Or dose he favor the American system of free initiative?

Does he favor reviving the principles of the agricultural adjustment act? Or does he favor allowing the farmer to be a lord on his own farm?

Does he favor concentrating more and more power in the hands of the Chief Executive? Or does he favor a return to the American form of government?

These three things are inseperable. If he wants the AAA, he must have the NRA. If he wants the NRA, he must have the AAA. And both are impossible without increased powers for the Chief Executive.

Challenges Roosevelt.

And so, in closing this meeting, I leave a challenge with the President. I say to him: Mr. President, I am willing to trust the people. I am willing to stand up and say openly that I am against economic planning by the Government. I am against the principles of the agricultural adjustment act. I am against the concentration of power in the hands of the Chief Executive.

Tell us where you stand, Mr. President. Tell us not in generalities, but clearly so that no one can mistake your meaning. And tell us why you have evaded the issue until the eve of the election.

I leave my gauge at your feet. My gauge is the gauge of your confidence, Mr. President—your confidence in the American people. My gauge is the gauge of your duty, Mr. President—your duty to the American people.

My gauge is the gauge of your faith, Mr. President—your faith in the American people.

By the words that you speak in 48 hours—the American people will know the measure of your confidence and your duty and your faith in their wisdom.

Boiler Efficiency Decreased by Soot

Soot on the heating surface of a boiler should be removed because it decreases efficiency by increasing the resistance to the flow of heat. The result is that the heat transfer to the water is reduced and the temperature of the flue gas higher than it would be if the surfaces were clean.

The reduction in heat transfer depends on the position and area of the sooted surfaces, the thickness of the soot and the percentage of the total heat absorbed by these surfaces when clean.

Large boilers are usually equipped with soot blowers. Fuel savings up to 8 per cent have been reported; 4 to 5 per cent is probably more conservative. Further losses may arise from incomplete combustion due to insufficient drafts caused by soot clogging the passages or flue, which may, and usually will, be much greater than the loss caused by the insulating effect.

'Jim,' Pet Crow, 1-Word Linguist And Ball Player

When he isn't officiating as justice of the peace or helping to police Tugwelltown, where he is employed as sergeant of the guard, Louis Gundling, of Lanham, Md., enjoys a friendly game of ball with his pet crow—Jim.

Jim, who first saw the light of day in a nest—a crow's nest to be exact—at Tugwelltown last June, has developed into quite a ball-player. In the pitcher's box he wouldn't attract a coach's eye, but his catching ability is something to "crow" about.

Jim also is quite a linguist—that is as far as crows are concerned. He says "Wa-wa" very distinctly, and this, Gundling insists, is Crowdom's pure-bred dialect for "hello."

Most of the time Jim is kept penned up in a chicken inclosure in the rear of the Gundling home. But on Sundays when Gundling is around to see that he doesn't get into any mischief, Jim is allowed the run of the lawn.

Gundling rescued his unusual pet from an abandoned nest and has raised him on a diet of bread, 17-year locusts and raw hamburger.

Marble is just plain marble ... but skillful hands can give it value that is hard to measure in terms of money. In The Discus Thrower there is such a wealth of art, skill and character that for 24 centuries art students have studied this simple marble statue and tried to copy it.

Barley is barley and hops are hops. With yeast and water they can be made into beer—all kinds of beer. But, when brewing skill at its finest takes these ingredients in hand, the finished product can be counted upon to win the acclaim of all students of the art of good living.

By Chanticleer.

Halloween will be Halloween this year—whether little boys or big boys are being considered. After dark may mean soaping Mrs. Fidd-leby's windows to young Washington. But to the boys who've grown up, after dark still means making a bit of whoopee where the lights are bright on the outside of the spots—and softly dim within.

In fact, Halloween, by itself, wasn't enough for Maryland Club Gardens. So tomorrow night they're combining their holiday with the festive opening of the new Mirror Room in the Crystal Bar. The new room is done much in the style of the rest of the bar—really a part of it. But enlarging the capacity considerably.

The Wintergarden now is virtually two night clubs. Each unit has its own entertainment—the Three Betas in the bar; Peggy Day sopranoing in the big room with Charlie Jeeter's orchestra for the dancers.

The Lotus puts its best foot forward with a special Paul Florenz Revels Revue—new faces, costumes and routines. The Uxtry Special—the Saturday night Halloween party—presents Bob and Florence Gilbert in a singing-dancing routine. Watch for the "Sadie Thompson" number. Judy Ellington is in a gala holiday voice and Al Norton is handling a holiday bill just as it should be done. Dinner, show and all—$2.50, including favors.

At the Mayflower, for one night only, closing has been pushed back one hour. Sidney's Orchestra, including Hal Veo, Buddy Harmon and Bobby Simpson, will be on hand. Many surprises for everyone promised.

A minimum charge of $1.50 for Halloween night has been announced by the Carlton's exclusive supper club, "El Patio."

If you are one to believe it takes more than a foursome to make a band you'll have a pet notion bowled over after listening to Bill Cassi and his former Waldorf Astoria Orchestra at Griffith Farms. Lots of swing in this small aggregation. Maestro Louis has planned a gala program for "spook night"—with a special menu, souvenirs, noise makers and so on.

Floor show has been revamped at the Club Volga Boatman for tomorrow night with favors and special decorations—just an informal evening of revelry for all. I understand Host Windsor plans to give a prize to the most talented guest.

Special plans are being made by Peter Borras for three big holiday nights—tonight, tomorrow and election nights—with the opening of the "4:40 Club" under the supervision of that popular Irishman, Frank McNey. Johnny Shaw and his Versatile Sextet have been engaged for late afternoon relaxers in the 4:40 Room—and also at nights. Everything at the Madrillon has been done over. Dark oak benches in red leather trim is the scheme now for the old Mayan room. Indirect lighting, deep rugs and freshened walls, too. Gordon Hitternmark has been engaged for election night to keep folks posted on the voting.

Plain, ordinary American hobgoblins and witches are kid stuff to what the Russian Troika will trot out, in Russian spirit, tomorrow night. Helen Hamilton promises really fantastic and perhaps terrifying costumes—and antics.

Orlik and Lolik, the team specializing in breath-taking swirls and swoops, will wear Russian costumes that will make our American interpretations hide their faces in shame. Yasha Nigorosoff, dagger dancer, will feature a comedy number which he insists makes an American pumpkin face look silly. However, as the parades of grotesque and fantastic are presented—Lady Hamilton promises something of genuine beauty as well.

The Queen of Washington's Halloween parade will visit the Shoreham tomorrow night, with the "king" and "court jester" and retinue to be guests of honor at the Shoreham's dinner dance. Gordon Hittenmark will be master of ceremonies—and Col. E. Goring Bliss, chairman of the celebration, will make the formal presentation of the Board of Trade cup to the queen. And a cake will be cut, too. This all comes off just after the parade downtown. You're invited, of course.

This being the season for pranks, Cocoanut Grove ups and announces a brand new band for Halloween tide and for an indefinite stay. The newcomer is Eric Correa (looks a lot like George Raft). Halloween floor shows have been set for 8:30, midnight and 2. Renee Villon is still the featured attraction. Not overlooking the chorus of 10 Broadway girls and four show girls from the "Follies," "Vanities" and other productions.

Albert Mueller has done it again. He's got a Broadway show together for tomorrow night, to celebrate properly, for the Broadmoor's Silver Grill. The talent roster includes Pearl White, tap dancer; Senorita Marcia, Spanish dancer; Dorothy Moore, Oriental dancer. Music by the Broadmoor Orchestra.

Out Casa Grande way (formerly the Dude Ranch) Halloween preparations merge into actual whoopee making beginning tonight. Why wait until tomorrow night, asks Milt Barrett? Bernard and DeVille will greet you on the floor this weekend. They're the best dance talent the Casa Grande has seen in some time. One of my spies insists that DeVille, the girl member, is blond.

"Seeing Things" is the apt title of the revue coming in today to grace the floor at La Paree. Spooks, maybe! Anyway, a gala week's entertainment is headed by Patricia and Renee, ballroom classical dance specialists; Billy Sands, the impersonating master of ceremonies, and the Alan-DeSylva girls—many of them—and all specialists. Fr example, Beatrice Amer, rhumba; Wanda Roberta, toe, and Vera Stanley, tap. Swinging to the music of Al Sakol and his orchestra. Tonight is College Night again, just as sure as Friday has rolled around.

Halloween begins early at Ruty's. Don't forget those football scores all afternoon in the cocktail lounge. Scores come in tele-something-or-other. Cocktails at Ruty's late in the afternoons—and supper entertainment beginning at 9.

No increase in prices at the Mayfair tomorrow night. Manager Jimmie Byrd made a solemn promise that Halloweeners will enjoy the same service, entertainment and all, Saturday night just as any other night, and for the same old prices.

Rescuers Save Injured Hunter Caught on Peak

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 29.—A young deer hunter with a broken leg was rescued today from a narrow ledge 1,000 feet from the bottom of a granite-studded canyon where he had lain ten hours while bobcats prowled the nearby brush.

Lloyd Rawson, the 21-year-old radio repairman, tumbled to the precarious ledge Wednesday morning when a rolling rock knocked him over the brow of a cliff in the towering Wasatch Mountains, 15 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

From his bed in a hospital here the husky Rawson said today, "I wasn't afraid, but it did get pretty cold up there."

"As night approached," he said, grinning, "I could hear bobcats stalking through the brush near where I was lying.

"I built a fire and the brush crackling ceased.

He said he rolled down the slope another 200 feet, lodging between two rocks and two pine trees on a two-foot ledge perched some 1,000 feet above the canyon bottom.

It was nearly noon yesterday when the injured man was found by his brother, Joe, 18, who ran and walked seven miles for help.

The younger Rawson and four men who returned with him, roped themselves together to ward off disaster as they toiled through the heavy underbrush and around giant boulders.

The descent was a problem. A stretcher was useless. Rawson tied his legs together, sat on his heavy coat and "slid down the mountain." Rescuers guided him between the timber and boulders. The "toboggan" slide required four hours.

Mine Workers Raise $113,378 For Roosevelt

Union Largest Contributor to Non-Partisan League Election Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Reporting campaign expenditures of $142,709 since its organization last spring, labor's Non-Partisan League, pledged to President Roosevelt, yesterday disclosed the United Mine Workers as its largest contributor.

Contributions to the league since May 29 totaled $160,144, the report said, of which $113,378 was received from the miners' union between September 1 and October 20.

In its final pre-election report to the clerk of the House, the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee listed expenditures of $179,763 and receipts of $184,751. From October 23 to 28, the report showed, the committee received $42,500 and spent $41,935.

The New Jersey Republican National Finance Committee reported contributions of $76,091 from October 16 to 28 and expenditures of $48,709.

While organization reports were being filed in the House, Senate candidates were submitting to the Senate their final pre-election reports.

Most expensive Senatorial campaign listed was that of Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, who reported receipts of $20,082 and expenditures of $15,598.52. His Democratic opponent, William H. Smathers, reported receipts of $4,565 and disbursements of $2,423.36.

Senator White (Republican), of Maine, reported receipts of $11,000 and expenditures of $8,616.69 in his successful drive for re-election. His Democratic opponent, Louis J. Brann, received $1,885 and spent $2,690.54.

Many candidates reported having neither receipts nor expenditures. These included Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina; Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas; Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia; Allen J. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana; Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi; Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama; Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, and Senator Robinson (Democrat), of Arkansas. The State of Arkansas scored a complete blank in the file when G. C. Ledbetter, Robinson's Republican opponent, also reported no contributions and no expenditures.

Rise in Population Called Alarming

Because for the last several years the municipal departments have been operating on appropriations originated to care for fewer than 500,000 persons, announcement Wednesday that Washington's population now is 619,000 is alarming. People's Counsel William A. Roberts asserted yesterday.

"It is obvious that the growing pains experienced by the schools, the police, the Fire Department, refuse collection and sanitary department are reflecting the increasing demands of this tremendous population increase," Roberts said.

He added the census figure was only 4,000 more than the population estimate he made for January 1, 1937.

Two Affidavits Are Filed Here in WPA Suit

Former New Jersey Workers Cite Gross Waste in Administration.

Affidavits of two former employes of the New Jersey office of the Works Progress Administration were added to the record in the suit brought by four New Jersey Republicans to compel disclosure of Administration spending yesterday in District Court.

The employes, Daniel J. O'Haire, former chief accountant for the New Jersey WPA, and Ernest S. Holland, former administrative assistant in New Jersey, cited gross waste in salaries and in administrative expenses. Their affidavits were presented in an amendment to the original complaint following the refusal of Justice Joseph W. Cox to permit them to be added to the complaint early in the week.

The Jerseyites asked that Harry L. Hopkins be compelled to open the WPA books to inspection by properly accredited officials in every State. The suit charged instances of extravagance and waste and stated that the information desired had been supplied Democrats for political purposes but had been denied Republicans.

Yesterday the four complainants said they had received information about the expenditures of the WPA, but that they doubted the information was correct. For that reason they asked permission to make personal inspection of the books to determine for themselves the correctness of the publicly released figures.

No action on the complaint can be had before the election, it was explained, because the petition, even if approved in District Court, would require many weeks to compile the information sought

Bricklayer, 30, Admits Battle Prior to Death

Police yesterday revealed that Albert Johnson, 30-year-old bricklayer, admitted he had been in a fight with Lester C. Thomas, 40, a short while before Thomas was found dead in his room at 718 Sixth street northwest.

Johnson, who was arrested at Fifth and G streets northwest by Sergt. William J. Liverman, will be held until a coroner's inquest at 11:30 a. m. today.

Police also are holding Mrs. Lillian L. Pauley, 39, who lives at the Sixth street address. She will appear at the inquest as a witness, police said. Two other men, Garland Johnson and Lewis Harris, were released yesterday after questioning.

Thomas was found dead Tuesday night by Garland Johnson, 34, no relative of the man held. An autopsy disclosed he died of a head injury.

Police said yesterday Albert Johnson told them he had a fight with Thomas during a drinking bout in the house. Other residents denied any knowledge of events leading up to Thomas' death.

Man Kills Wife Carrying Child, Then Ends Life

Slaying Takes Place in Peoria Welfare Office; 3 Are Left Orphans.

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 29.—As she clasped her 4-year-old daughter in her arms, Mrs. Wilma Roe, 27, Lewistown, Ill., was shot to death today by her husband, David, who then took his own life. The child was not hurt.

The shooting took place in the offices of the Peoria Welfare Association, where Mrs. Roe had gone to complain concerning her husband's continued absence from home.

Police, investigating the shooting, learned that Roe had been living here for several weeks.

Police Chief Fred Nussbaum said, Roe, 31, learned his wife was at the welfare office. He went to the office, dragged his wife and child, Donna, into the hall, and shot the mother four times.

The chief said Roe then fired a bullet into his temple.

Two other children of the couple, Sheila, 5, and Jeanette, 2, were in the welfare office when the shooting took place, the chief added.

Champion Long-Distance Horse Is Destroyed in 'Mercy Death'

"Gypsy Queen," whose feat of traveling 11,356 miles through every State in the Union under pack and saddle earned for her an enviable place in the equine hall of fame, is dead. She was sacrificed to science to save her from the infirmities of old age.

Eleven years ago last April 1, "Gypsy Queen" and her owner, Frank M. Heath, of Silver Spring, Md., left the Zero Milestone here on what was destined to result in establishing an all-time endurance record for riding horses. In the words of her master, this performance clinched her claim to the title of "world's champion long-distance tripper."

Since that day of triumph, however, time has taken its toll. She developed a bad knee. A skin disease began to torture her. Although he continued to ride her on shopping trips to the stores almost every day, Heath could see she was "going down hill."

He hated to think that the once beautiful mare, with the blood of the Kentucky Morgans in her veins, should ever grow helpless and miserable.

Yesterday at the University of Maryland, veterinarians attending a convention of the Maryland State Veterinary Medical Association, administered a "merciful" death to the aging animal.

"After all she's been through with me, I feel kind of touchy about it," the 68-year-old war veteran said last night.

No longer ago than Wednesday he had ridden her to the store, he said.

"Still it's best," he bemoaned a little plaintively—"better than letting her go until she got miserable."

"In my will all the records of the trip that she and I made are given to the animal husbandry department of the University of Maryland. I have already given them the horse."

"Gypsy Queen," who celebrated her twenty-first birthday last April by eating a "hot dog" in lieu of a birthday cake, will be used by students of the university in the study of anatomy and zoology.

An autopsy was performed on her yesterday by Dr. P. C. Underwood for the study of parasitic ailments afflicting horses.

Thomas Cochran Member of Firm Since War; Was Copper Expert.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Thomas Cochran, 65, partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., died of a heart attack today at his home in Bedford Village, N. Y. He had been a partner in the Morgan firm since January, 1917.

A native of St. Paul, Minn., he came to J. P. Morgan & Co. from the presidency of the Liberty National Bank. He was chairman of the executive committe of the Bankers Trust Co. and a director and member of the finance committe of Kennecott Copper Corporation.

Mr. Cochran's death followed ill health for several years. He died in his sleep this morning. He had planned, however, to come to his office today.

Mr. Cochran was an outstanding member of the group of Morgan financial leaders, and was closely associated with such partners as the late Dwight W. Morrow and H. P. Davison in many of the banking firm's big financial operations of the period during and after the World War.

He was among the chief representatives of the Morgan interests in the copper industry and in banking.

He was graduated from Yale in 1894.

7 Movie Bombings Cause N. Y. Panics

New York, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Hundreds of persons were thrown into a panic tonight and four were injured when tear gas bombs exploded almost simultaneously in seven motion picture houses.

The bombs, crudely made and attached to timing devices, exploded in the Liberty, Times, Central, Globe and Park theaters, just off Times Square, and the Colony Theater, Queens and Sanders Theater, Brooklyn. Labor troubles were blamed although managements of each house denied any union difficulties.

Judge Will Spare Dog If He Gets Rural Home

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29 (AP).—Condemned to death today as "too dangerous for the city," Jackie, a 6-year-old police dog, may be allowed to live after all, City Court Judge Joseph J. Kelly said tonight.

"If a place can be found for him in the country, away from children and other dogs, I am willing to spare him," the judge said.

Judge Kelly sentenced Jackie after neighbors testified he had attacked other dogs without provocation, killing a fox terrier and maiming a pomeranian.

Writer Starts Term For Urging Slayings

Paris, Oct. 29 (AP).—Charles Maurras, director of the royalist newspaper Action Francaise, was taken to Sante Prison tonight to begin an 11-month term as the result of newspaper articles written by him.

A court of appeals rejected his final appeal from conviction on a charge of provocation to political murder.

His newspaper printed attacks on Premier Leon Blum last spring and he was accused specifically of urging the killing of 140 deputies who favored application of sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian War.

Capt. Robert Howe Fletcher, a Naval Acaremy graduate, who switched to the Army because he preferred to fight Indians in the West, died Wednesday night in Walter Reed Hospital. He was 86 years old.

Born in Cincinnati July 21, 1850, he was the son of Dr. Robert Fletcher, brevet colonel and medical purveyor of the Army of the Cumberland during the Civil War.

A member of the 1872 class at Annapolis, Capt. Fletcher gave up his commisison in the Navy to transfer to the Army because it offered more action. During the Nez Perce campaign, he was aide de camp and chief of scouts to the late Maj. Gen. O. O. Howard.

Capt. Fletcher received numerous citations for bravery in Indian warfare. His brevet rank of captain was a reward for gallantry displayed at the Battle of Clearwater.

Physical hardships imposed by his military service brought about his retirement while still a young man. Settling in San Francisco, he took an active part in civic affairs and soon became prominent as a painter, author and clubman.

For many years he was a leading member of the Bohemian Club. In 1901 he became curator and active directing head of the San Francisco Art Association and of the School of Design of the University of California. He took an important part in rebuilding of the city after the earthquake of 1906.

Capt. Fletcher retired from active and civic affairs in 1914 and since that time had divided his time between Washington and Europe. His wife, now dead, was the former Octavia Shreve Miller, of Louisville, Ky. One son survives, Lieut. Col. Robert Howe Flecher, jr., who is stationed here.

J. T. Bresnahan, Western Union Official, Is Dead

Ex-Messenger Boy Knew All Presidents Since Cleveland.

James T. Bresnahan, 70, of 7 Rhode Island avenue northeast, assistant in the Washington office of the Western Union Telegraph Co., died yesterday at his residence after a brief illness.

A "Horatio Alger" career led Bresnahan from his job as a messenger boy, 56 years ago, to the position he held at the time of his death.

A native of Washington, he drew his first pay as a messenger in 1880, when he was 14. He was perhaps the first uniformed delivery youngster to ride a bicycle through the Capital's streets.

From messenger boy he rose to telephone operator. He was dispatched in his youth to small towns in nearby Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, where he operated small offices. Then he returned to the Washington office, where he remained on duty until a few days before his death.

As one of the leading contact men for his company, Bresnahan knew all the Presidents from Cleveland to Franklin D. Roosevelt. He was widely known on Capitol Hill and elsewhere in official Washington.

On September 11 he reached the retirement age, but the company granted his request that he be allowed to continue on active duty.

Surviving Bresnahan are his wife, Mrs. Ella Briggs Bresnahan; a daughter, Mrs. George Gillingham; a son, H. Raymund Bresnahan, a Chicago attorney, and seven grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at Hines undertaking establishment at 9 a. m. tomorrow, followed by requiem mass at St. Martin's Catholic Church at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Cuxhaven, Germany, Oct. 29 (AP). Divers tonight located the wrecked lightship Elbe at the bottom of the Elbe estuary, where it sank Tuesday with all 15 hands aboard in a driving gale. No bodies were recovered.

On the Air Today

Last Sunday Nelson Eddy noticed a slim, dark-haired girl in Paul Taylor's chorus listening intently to Josef Pasternak's musicians as they rehearsed Rudolf Friml's "Chansonette."

She was so absorbed in the music that she seemed oblivious to everything and everyone around her. After the last note had faded into silence, Eddy strolled over and said: "That music has taken you a long way from here. Do you like it that much?"

"Yes, indeed," the girl said. "My father—wrote that selection."

And, in truth, she was Friml's daughter—singing obscurely in the chorus under the "alias" of her married name. Incidentally, her husband, William Days, also sings in the group. No one had guessed she was the daughter of the distinguished composer.

She explained she had chosen that method in an attempt to climb to the top of the musical ladder—without capitalizing on the reputation of her father. She is 24 years old, slight of build and decidedly brunette.

"I sang blues for a while, but both William and my father thought creative music was more suited to me," she said. "So I've been studying for two years with a good teacher, and when I feel I'm ready for it I'll attempt to do solo work in the musical comedies I particularly like."

Mrs. Allan A. Ryan Wed To Mr. William R. Stewart

Miss May Abernathy Married to Mr. Smithson Here; Other Weddings Include Those of Miss Trew and Mr. Trouland, Miss Marsh and Mr. Kaiser.

Weddings still hold the center of the stage. Capital society had its attention divided yesterday between New York and Washington, in both of which there were marriages of much interest. Chief among them was that of Mrs. Allan A. Ryan, jr., the former Miss Janet Newbold, to Mr. William Rhinelander Stewart, which took place in New York and is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Newbold.

Miss May Abernathy, Mr. Smith Married.

Mrs. Elwood C. Davis announces the marriage of her daughter, May Davis Abernathy, to Mr Conover Carnes Smith, son of Col. and Mrs. Hugh Carnes Smith, which took place yesterday at high noon. The ceremony was performed here by the Rev. Joseph L. Loughran at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph R. Sheetz, with only members of the two families present.

The bride's mother gave her in marriage and her sister acted as her matron of honor. The bridegroom's brother, Lieut. Hule Austin Smith, served as best man.

After a wedding trip by motor the couple will reside in Kansas City, Mo., where they will be at home December 1 at the Robert Browning Apartments.

Mr. Smith attended George Washington University and was graduated from Yale.

Mr. M. D. Rosenberger, Jr., Miss Revness Wed in N. Y.

The marriage of Miss Charlotte Bernice Revness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Revness, of New York, and formerly of Washington, to Mr. Maurice D. Rosenberg, jr., son of Mr. Maurice D. Rosenberg, of Washington, took place in New York yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at the Roosevelt Hotel. The ceremony was performed by Dr. William Franklin Rosenbloom, in the presence of the immediate families and close friends.

Miss Helen Liebman, of Washington, was the bride's only attendant, and Mr. Paul Wilner, also of Washington, acted as best man for Mr. Rosenberg. Other Washingtonians who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice D. Rosenberg, Miss Audrey Rosenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gusdorf and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Gusdorf.

Mr. Rosenberg is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and his bride graduated from the Madeira School here. Upon their return from a wedding trip to Nassau, they will be at home after November 15 at the Alban Towers in Washington.

Miss McGrath Is Wed To Mr. Herman F. Kaiser.

Another wedding of interest to Washington which took place in New York was that of Miss Cecelia T. McGrath, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGrath, of Salem, Mo., to Mr. Herman F. Kaiser, formerly of Reno, Nev. The ceremony was performed in the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City.

The bride, who is secretary to Dr. C. S. Morgan, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, attended George Washington University and is now a law student at National University.

Mr. Kaiser, who is a scientist in the Naval Research Laboratory, was graduated from the University of Nevada and also attended George Washington and Johns Hopkins universities for graduate work. He and his bride will reside in Washington.

Miss Alice Trew Weds Mr. Walter Trouland.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot W. Trew was the scene of the wedding here at 4 p. m. yesterday of their daughter, Miss Alice O. Trew, to Mr. Walter Robert Trouland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Trouland, of this city. The Rev. John F. Fannon performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a Chanel model of ivory moire with a high plaited neck line and full puffed sleeves coming to a point over the hands, and the skirt plaited from the waistline and falling in a long train. Her shower bouquet was of roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. Dorothy Summers, her sister, as matron of honor, and Miss Sally Howe, as maid of honor. Mrs. Summers wore a rose moire frock made with puffed sleeves and a full skirt with matching hat, and Miss Howe wore the same model in peach bloom moire. Both carried talisman roses.

Mr. John H. Holmead was best man and Mr. Randolph Burruss the usher.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University.

Miss Peggy Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lee, of this city, was married at 10 a. m. yesterday to Mr. Elvin F. Higdon, son of Mr. Ambrose F. Higdon and the late Mrs. Higdon. The ceremony took place at St. Anthony's Church, the Rev. Thomas E. Sweeney officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white satin gown with a long tulle veil. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Joseph Baldwin, who served as matron of honor. Mrs. Baldwin wore a frock of peacock blue taffeta.

Mr. Chester Limric was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Walter Everett and Mr. John Rea Farrell. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held for members of the wedding party and the immediate families.

After a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. Higdon and his bride will live at 4009 Forty-seventh street.

Ashburns Entertain.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Q. Ashburn entertained at a cocktail party in their home yesterday afternoon in honor of the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Col. and Mrs. William Holt Peek, who will leave shortly for their new station at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Turkish Envoy Gives Reception On Anniversary

Washington Society Enjoys Brilliant Party Amidst Oriental Atmosphere.

By Dudley Harmon.

Footmen with scarlet livery and an air of great composure, free-flowing champagne and exotic pastries imparted a note of Oriental splendor to the reception held yesterday afternoon by the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun. The occasion was the thirteenth anniversary of the ascension to power of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, and "absolutely everybody" in Washington was there.

Unique, even in the Capital, is the Turkish Embassy, where the reception was held. Formerly the home of the late Edward Everett (who amassed a fortune manufacturing bottles), the house has floors of teakwood and mahogany, gold door-knobs in the drawing room, and glass in the windows by Tiffany. It even has a swimming pool in the basement, to say nothing of the roof garden on top overlooking Rock Creek Park.

Receives With Husband.

Mme. Ertegun, who chose for the occasion a long black gown of crepe, received with the Ambassador in one of the smaller drawing rooms. Another room was cleared for dancing, and in the dining room a table was spread with delicacies, which included a delicious Turkish concoction called Baklaba, a mixture of honey and spun sugar.

Early arrivals were the Ambassador of Italy and Signora Suvich, the latter wearing a gray tailored ensemble with a matching hat. The Minister of Norway and Mme. de Morgenstierne were leaving the same time they did, Mme. de Morgenstierne wearing a mink cape over her black gown and a mink trimmed toque. Other heads of foreign embassies there included the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, who was accompanied by the Counselor of Embassy and Mme. Oumansky; the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, with whom was his daughter, Mme. Ernest Schlatter, and the Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite.

Mrs. March Present.

Mrs. Peyton March, wife of Gen. March, was talking with Mrs. Kenneth Bewley, wife of the Financial Counselor of the British Embassy, who looked very chic in a tailleur of beige broadcloth and brown velvet. Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, wore over her blonde curls a high-crowned black hat trimmed with red velvet.

Signor Benedetto Capomazza dei Marchesi di Campolattaro, of the Italian Embassy, was present, and reported that Signor Tommassi, former secretary of the embassy here, was planning to be married soon to a young Italian woman. He left Washington last winter for a post in the foreign office in Rome.

Mrs. Herrick Attends.

The Second Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, Mr. Ibrahim Seyfullah, was busy doing the honors and winding his way through the thick crowd around the punch table to see that everyone had a glass of champagne. Friends of Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick were greeting her on all sides on one of her first appearances since an automobile accident last year, in which it will be recalled Mr. Seyfullah also was injured.

Others noted in the throng: The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, Mr. Walter Tuckerman, peering over the heads of people for Mrs. Tuckerman; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Mr. Edward Kulikowski, of the Polish Embassy; Miss Cibilla Skidelsky, daughter of Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister; Mrs. Russell Bennet, lorgnette in hand; Maj. George Oakley Totten, architect, who designed the embassy; Lieut. Col. John Crane, formerly attached to our embassy in Turkey; Miss Caroline Thompson, Miss Alice Graeme, Mrs. William T. Mann, with Mrs. Enid Sims Snow, and at least 100 others.

Debutante and Guest at Luncheon

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Henrietta Talbott, left, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Talbott, snapped by the cameraman with the guest of honor, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Fulton. The first debutante of the season, she was presented yesterday at a large luncheon at the Mayflower.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Vivacious Eve Mark-Wardlaw, debutante daughter of the Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy, and her mother are sailing tomorrow from New York on the S. S. Georgic for Europe. Eve is to spend the winter in Switzerland with a French family, putting finishing touches on her French. She is very fond of skiing and will have plenty of time for it in her winter home. She may be missing the debutante season here, but she will make up for it when she makes her bow in London at coronation time.

* * * *

Yesterday when Francis Perkins gave her splendid speech in the Erlanger Theater, in Chicago, before an audience which was supposedly to have been of women, the listeners were packed to the doors, and about every other person was a man! Two popular Washingtonians who were on the platform to greet the Secretary were Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, both in stunning black suits and matching accessories.

* * * *

Louise Chase Myers knows just exactly what to do about something when she wants action. She is an ardent follower of horse shows and we suppose that with so many happening in the past few days they became more or less a habit with her. Anyway she and Mrs. D. N. Lee, of Middleburg, are getting up one of their very own to take place tomorrow and it promises to be good.

* * * *

Marion Rybold, who rides every day of her life unless something unforeseen crops up, has decided her equestrienne schedule is all muddled up. In the first place brother Jack went off on maneuvers taking their horses with him, and now he is off again, this time for Wilmington, where, in addition to DuPonts' there are hunts, and very good ones. After a week of riding to hounds, horses and master will once again be here.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, attractive young wife of the Minister of Norway, believes in getting out bright and early. Yesterday morning when the passing automobiles were still spotted with silvery frost and there was too much chill in the air to suit us, the young diplomatic hostess was on her way down F street. She had on a swagger coat of beige wool with a soft collar of honey fox and brown accessories just matching her small felt hat with its diminutive veil.

Young Master Marcus Woodring has great respect for revolving doors. Perhaps his early acquaintance with them will prepare him for the merry-go-rounds of later years, who knows. Anyway he regarded the one at the Mayflower with wide eyes yesterday when going with his mother out to meet sister Melissa, who awaited them in the car at the curb. Mrs. Woodring was in a brightish blue, and her son was in exactly the same shade hat and coat.

League Entertains.

The League for the Larger Life will give a Halloween costume party and dance on Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at league headquarters, 1414 Sixteenth street.

Traffic Group Resumes Work

Woman's Committee Holds First Fall Session; Six New Members.

If traffic runs smoothly in Washington, if stop lights are at the right corners and signs give accurate directions to motorists, part of the credit is due the prominent women of the Capital who comprise the woman's committee of the American Automobile Association. The group, formed three years ago to work with the advisory committee, of which Mr. George W. Offutt is chairman, is headed by Mrs. George C. Thorpe.

The first fall meeting of the Woman's committee was held Wednesday morning in the Sulgrave Club, and monthly sessions will follow through the winter. New members this season include Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. Laurence Benet, who has recently taken up residence in Washington after 37 years in Paris; Mrs. William Pierre Robert, Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mrs. Seth Richardson and Mrs. Harvey Wiley.

Others who have been serving for the past two years are Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. Sydney Taliaferro, Mrs. John J. O'Connor and Mrs. Lloyd Biddle.

The members study traffic problems and make recommendations for their solution.

Pastorizas Hosts At Luncheon Today For Del Castillo

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza will entertain at a luncheon today in honor of the Minister of Mexico to the Dominican Republic, Senor Juan Manuel Alvarez del Castillo.

The guests will include the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, the Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos and the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Lozano.

Miss Richards Due To Return Here Nov. 1

Miss Janet Richards, who has been making an extended visit in Honolulu, where she was the guest of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Briant H. Wells, has returned to California and now is the guest of Miss Mary Crans, formerly of Washington, who now makes her home in San Diego.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have known this young man for a long, long time; practically all my life, and simply had a sisterly love for him. I did not want to love him any other way. He claims to have loved me since he was 18. He is now 27. My great interest in him arose when friends called my attention to his appearance. He made good money but drank hard and wasted it on women until he didn't have a whole suit of clothes to his back.

• • • •

I talked to him and persuaded him to give up all this. He did, and has never gone back to the old life. He declared his love for me to my friends and to me, although I put him off until last August a year ago. He begged me for two years to return his love. He showered me with candy, perfume, trinkets and gifts of all kinds. He was so lovely to me that I finally decided to give him a chance and we got along happily for a few months.

• • • •

Now, Miss Haworth, I have a friend who is at least 18 years older than I—and I am 30. The young man was thrown in her company quite a bit last winter and they became quite infatuated with each other. This friend of mine has been like a mother to me. I have always told her my secrets; she has known my happy hours and my sad hours. I looked up to her and thought she had a beautiful character. You can imagine my grief when I learned the man was showering her with gifts, too.

• • • •

Both of them know that I know what is going on. She tries to hide his gifts and he has lied outrageously about them—always declaring that I am his true love. He has even gone so far as to say, "I don't want that old hen-pecked woman."

Miss Haworth, will you kindly express your opinion as to the kind of characters these people possess? I cannot understand her accepting gifts from him, knowing how close he and I have been. Is it because she is losing her youth and feels flattered by his attention? Or are they really in love?

• • • •

I have begged him to tell me the truth. We have an engagement ring and I have offered it to him on more than one occasion. He will not hear to this. I have kept away from him and he has actually come back crying and begging me to take him back. I had grown to love him at one time, but since discovering this deception I feel at times that I never wish to see him again. I have tried in every way to work this out, but have only been hurt the more . . . Thanking you for an answer through The Post, I remain,

HURT.

'An Unstable Character.

DEAR HURT: In all probability the man is a neurotic individual who craves and responds to the maternal love from woman; the sort of man who cannot find satisfaction in, nor feel appreciative of, the type of love which a normal woman gives to the man she regards as her sweetheart. It would appear that he found himself most ardently interested in you while you were playing the supervisory role of parent, teacher and guide in his affairs and that his interest in the much older woman blossomed after you had begun to act on the assumption that you had finally made a man of him and could afford to discard the mother role.

• • • •

He is probably looking to the other woman for mothering, while clinging to you out of long habit of dependence, realizing it was your force of character which brought order and self-respect into his life, and thinking that if that stabilising influence is withdrawn, he will go to pieces again. Also, his emotional temperament may be so unstable that he can never be wholly faithful to one woman, no matter how indispensable she may be to his happiness and sense of well-being."

• • • •

The older woman's betrayal of your long-standing friendship is more understandable than excusable. For one thing, many women nearing 50 are pathetically susceptible to masculine gallantry from almost any source. For another, few women of any age are so loyally committed to friendship with a member of their own sex that they will place that friendship ahead of an opportunity to indulge in a stimulating flirtation; which, after all, may be only human nature. Their attitude in such cases usually is: "Well, it certainly isn't my fault if poor Jane can't hold her man." In my opinion, your erstwhile friend is simply an average woman.

• • • •

It is impossible to say whether the attachment between the two is likely to endure; whether they are "really in love" or only playing a tentative game of hearts. But if you wish to find out just where you stand with the man, the only thing to do is break the engagement, return his ring by mail (if he refuses to accept it in person) and give him explicitly to understand that you do not expect to play second fiddle to the other woman, nor to share his affections with any woman. Then, if he is not seriously interested in her, he will undoubtedly cast her aside and return to your doorstep to resume his pleadings and lamentations. If you forgive him and take him back, it will probably be only a matter of time until you have to live the whole thing over again with some other woman as the villainess of the piece. If you really value your happiness, my advice to you is to have done with him. He isn't worth bothering with. M. H.

Old Pantries Provide Breakfast Nook Space

When an old-fashioned kitchen is being streamlined and entire new unit installed, the large pantry closet that was always found in such a room is often unnecessary with the new arrangement. A breakfast nook can easily be built in this space.

Benches can be built in on either side and upholstered, a table with only one leg at the end, and a mirror on the back wall to give the appearance of depth will make an attractive nook.

Tall Stories No Sign Child Means to Lie

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"WHY DOES my child tell such incredible stories? There is no such things as a pink horse, and yet he claims that he saw one as big as a house. Every time he comes home from a walk he describes lions and tigers that he met and one day he said that he saw an alligator on Main street. He chooses such impossible things to romance about—things that anyone would know he could not possibly have seen."

How does the child know these things are incredible? At 4 or 5 one has had so little experience that anything is possible. If one has seen only a very few horses one has no reason to suppose that they do not come in all colors and sizes. Why not lions and tigers and alligators on Main street as well as in the jungle?

Of course he is romancing, and his mother at once decides that he is a liar.

Honesty is not an instinct, but must be learned. The child is not born knowing the difference between fact and fancy. He hears his father and mother telling about what they saw—frequently father and mother exaggerate just a little to add color to the description—and he, too, wants to hold the stage with his fantastic anecdotes which he probably thinks are true.

He builds these out of his imagination. How does he know his parents do not do the same thing?

It is a good plan to take his fictions in a very matter of fact way, and not to pay too much attention to them. Experience will teach him his mistake soon enough. Lies and fairy tales are not the same thing.

CAPITAL MANNERS

Broken Engagement May Require a Formal Announcement.

By Margaret Wallace.

ANNOUNCING an engagement is a simple matter. But the proper procedure for making known a broken engagement is a more delicate problem.

If the engagement has not been announced publicly the couple may notify personal friends informally that the engagement has been broken. However, the engagement that has been announced either in the newspaper or at a party requires a formal notice of its termination.

If the engagement has been announced in the society columns, a notice should be sent to such columns by the parents of the girl or by a close relative. The young man or his parents do not make any formal announcements. It is quite proper, however, for them to tell their friends that the engagement no longer exists and to write letters making this statement.

Reasons for broken engagements should not be stated either in formal or informal announcements.

If the young woman has been given an engagement ring by her former fiance she should, of course, return it. It is not necessary to return letters and gifts of other kinds. No self-respecting young girl will keep expensive jewelry given her by a man to whom she is no longer engaged. But it is also to be remembered that it is not good form in the first place to accept such presents from a man even though he may be a fiance.

QUERY—I was engaged to a young man who lives in another city. We decided to break our engagement because we have each found someone else we want to marry. We are not prominent people and I do not think anyone but our small circle of friends will be interested in our broken engagement. Under the circumstances do you think it is necessary for my parents to send an announcement to the newspapers. The engagement was not announced formally but all our friends knew about it. Do you think I should wait several months before I tell of my engagement to another man?

ANSWER—Under the circumstances it will not be necessary to make any public announcement. You should tell your friends either by telephone, personal conversation or notes and the young man can do the same. It would be good taste to wait until all your friends have learned of the broken engagement to the first man before you announce your engagement to anyone else.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Football Hazards.

Does football fall into the category of physiological exercise? Yes, if the players are trained! No, if they are "green" and soft! The game is strenuous and calls for unusual mental alertness as well as physical prowess. Great bursts of energy are demanded with every muscle fiber as taut as a bowstring.

This is the season when high school and college games are the order of the day and football leads the van. Thousands of lads are involved and many casualties are bound to ensue. The test of a good coach is not only a smooth functioning—and now and then a winning team—but includes as well his ability to protect his players and the prompt and adequate attenion given to all injuries.

A survey by the football coaches association has shown that those with the greatest experience have the lowest average accident rate. Furthermore, that those who have actually participated in the game—that is, have been expert players—can advise their proteges as to the best means of avoiding harmful falls.

The style of football has changed materially in recent years. It is now more open, hence men of lighter weight are used. The huge, upholstered 250 pounders of a few years ago are not fast enough, as a rule, to compete with their fleet opponents. Heavily padded uniforms have given way to bare legs, light shoes, thin jerseys and satin pants. Shoulder pads are still used, but of greater moment are headguards, which will, at least, break the shock of a fall. These, however, may be dangerous to the wearer's adversary. In blocking, concussions may befall both the blocked and the blocking players.

As we would expect, by far the greatest number of misadvantures occur among high school and grammar grade participants. This is because they are not well developed or trained. Usually, their muscles are not hard and firm and they are sometimes thrust into contests with but a week or two of preliminary experience. The unseasoned youth is a ready victim as in the one who is caught off his guard and who is not ready to meet an emergency with all faculties alert.

Sometimes catastrophes occur because a player is physically unfit and, in every instance—even with school youngsters—the heart, the lungs, the kidneys and other vital organs should be checked for possible antecedent damage. Every athletic team—high school or college—therefore, should have a staff physician who is interested and skilled in the treatment of injuries.

To the credit of coaches, athletic directors and school authorities, football disasters have decreased markedly under improved instruction and added precautions. In fact, serious mishaps will bear but an insignificant relation to traffic hazards when we consider that between 30,000 and 40,000 college students, more than half a million high school students, and nearly an equal number of grammar school lads engage in the game each autumn.

Dresses of White House Ladies To Feature Velvet Ball Tonight

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

"THE DRESSES of the Mistresses of the White House," presented in a tableau, will be the high light of the velvet ball at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, tonight. The originals have been carefully preserved and are in the United States National Museum here in Washington. Ten of these gowns have been authentically reproduced by Helen Lee Meyer, fashion historian, and will be modeled by matrons and debutantes of social importance.

Presidents' wives' inaugural gowns, except on rare occasions, have been outstanding examples of decorous dressing. Most of these First Ladies have toned down their clothes to circumvent any criticism on the part of the ever-alert public.

When Martha Washington became First Lady of America the question of official etiquette was still undecided—there being no social precedent to follow, except that which existed in the courts of Europe.

During the Revolution and subsequent to it, Gen. and Mrs. Washington wore clothes purchased in the United States. The salmon-colored silk inaugural dress worn by Mrs. Washington was probably purchased in London. It has hand-painted designs of North American insects; the fly, grasshopper, spider, lady bug and wasp appear cleverly executed in the pattern. Martha Washington herself embroidered the old-fashioned ribbon work bag which she carries in the familiar inaugural picture.

Dolly Madison changed the modes and manners of her distinguished predecessors by letting down the social bars, and, accordingly, was regarded as very democratic. She decided at once that the President's wife should return all visits, and became her own social arbiter. Notwithstanding her lack of etiquette, Dolly Madison did more to create a fashion than any other First Lady and is outstanding in a long line of unusual women. Her inaugural gown was made of yellow satin, brocaded elaborately in bunches of silver wheat. Chinese embroidery was popular at this time and the turban head-dress, which was very much affected by women of fashion, found in the vivacious Dolly an able exponent.

There is no period in American history when women dressed more lavishly, according to authorities, than during the time when Julia Dent Grant was First Lady. The dress of Mrs. Grant in the Museum is proof of this statement; white silver brocade, made with elegant simplicity. It was a gift to the President's wife from the Emperor of China. Although Mrs. Grant followed her husband's fortunes through failure and poverty, it left little impress on her gayety and charm. She was most hospitable, entertaining extensively, both privately and publicly.

During the troubled days of the war, when Edith Bolling Wilson was First Lady, there was little entertaining, and at the close of her life in the White House she seldom left the apartment of her invalid husband. Her dress, which has been placed in the United States National Museum, was purchased in Paris—part of her trousseau. It is made of black velvet with a narrow skirt, trimmed with jet; there is a small, flat train draped at the waistline, with jet trimmings on either side. Strings of shining black beads hang down from the corsage and around the arms; the sleeves are of tulle.

We are again in the velvet, jet and tulle period, after almost 20 years. Gowns of velvet, for daytime, afternoon and evening—the last word in current fashion trends—will be modeled in the Fashion Parade; the modern part of the fashion pageant. The debutantes who will dance in the cotillion will wear red, white and blue velvet. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will distribute the debutante favors, wearing a black velvet gown from Milgrim. The Waldorf ballroom will be decorated in American flags and the tableaux will take place in a replica of the Blue Room of the White House.

How to Tell Fortunes

SOMETIMES a jesting remark turns out to be true. The other evening at a gay little party one of the girls started to read fortunes from tea leaves.

She put a spoonful of tea into the cup—poured over boiling water—brewed and then drained the cup dry. She had Ronny, her "victim," place the cup upside down in the saucer, turn the cup around from left to right three times. Then, setting the cup upright without disturbing the leaves in it, she told what she saw, as indicated by the symbols in the cup.

In the cup the leaves had formed a decided ring. "I see in the cup a ring and three large dots," the fortune teller said. "The rule of three is acting favorably in your romance and within a short while you will be married." Three days later Ronny's affair with Lola ended in an elopement.

Fortune-telling is but one bright idea in the 40-page booklet, "Good Parties." It also contains ice-breakers, parlor and magic tricks, riddles, magic mirror, witches' cauldron and other ideas for Hallowe'en parties, including menus. Also stork showers—church or charity benefits—charades—progressive parties and many other suggestions for novelties, sure-fire hits and no dull moments. "Good Parties" is sure to come in very handy throughout the winter.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Good Parties," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Modern Woman Is Too Cocksure, Expert Warns

Mussolini Personality Is Handicap to Jobseeker, Says Specialist.

IS THE MODERN business woman developing a Mussolini personality?

That she is in grave danger of doing so seems to be the conclusion of Alice Rice Cook, a former University of Columbia professor, who has become a specialist in diagnosing the handicaps of women in getting and holding jobs and friends.

Miss Cook left the classroom to become a "doctor of personality" after she had worked on a study at Teachers' College which indicated that "personal adequacy" counts for more than 75 per cent in business success, while technical training and brains rate less than 25. In an interview with Dorothy Dayton in the November issue of the Independent Woman, Miss Cook rates cockiness and an overserious facial expression as among the chief personality drawbacks of the mature business woman.

These faults she attributes largely to the fact that women in business have "stuck out their chins" to cover up the original lack of self-confidence that developed when they left their homes for business careers.

Faults Diagnosed.

In diagnosing her clients, Miss Cook calls in men consultants. These, she reports, criticize women more often for harsh voices and hard faces than for any other shortcomings.

The article discusses other phases of Miss Cook's work as follows:

"Miss Cook is inclined to believe that advertising has made women so conscious of clothes, grooming and physical charm generally that they are seldom far at fault in these respects. Certainly Miss Cook's clients are not often criticized on these grounds; not even when they obviously are too stout. The men who interview them aren't concerned, and many a fat woman is the office pet. But they do notice 'sloppiness,' which is just another way of saying that after you tip the scales at a certain point you need a foundation garment fitted by an expert.

"Another frequently mentioned physical defect, pointed out by men, is bad posture, including an ungraceful walk. This is another defect which, like the unpleasant voice and the grim facial expression, is likely to be the outward manifestation of an attitude of mind. Most women could learn to be lighter on their feet, but worse even than a heavy walk is that tendency so many mature women have of leaning forward from the middle, as though their hurry was so great that the feet could not possibly keep up with the nose. Nothing creates a general impression of youth more than a brisk, but not aggressive, walk, and a posture that reflects poise and alertness.

Hair Important.

"When men do criticize details of the feminine beauty ensemble, it's usually the hair. As a rule, men get only general effects; women see details. This rule applies especially to the hair. It is the one physical attribute that men always notice. Miss Cook's advice is to have the hair shampooed atnd waved in a good shop as often as necessary, even if it's every five or six days. In the long run, it's a better investment than the same amount spent on the clothes budget. Any woman can do her own fingernails, if she has to, but hair usually requires professional care.

"While voice and facial expression are the liabilities listed most commonly by her men consultants, Miss Cook finds that the quality all men rejoice over in women is—well, unfortunately they don't know just what to call it. Some call it energy, many speak of it as aliveness, others refer to it vaguely as vitality or warmth of personality."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 29.

OUR SWELL WEDDING season, autumn style, has just burst forth. Passing stylish St. Bartholomew's on Park avenue the other day, I saw the first of the fall's prettiest brides, Pamela Prime, come down the hymeneal gangplank on the arm of her handsome and blushing bridegroom, Tell Schreiber. Pam was also the prettiest debutante of 1934-35, which certainly gives her some sort of a prize.

ALICE HUGHES.

There was the usual gaping crowd and the usual officious cops, but I realized that our top-drawer weddings at St. Bartholomew's and St. Thomas' are pretty stiff and stuffy. Gotham socialites have never learned to beam upon the great unwashed at the church door, as have our London friends.

During my recent stop-over in the British metrop I was lucky enough to get standing room at the curb for a wedding at lovely old St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, at one corner of Trafalgar Square. I happened by just as the wedding party issued from the fane, while the bells in the steeple rolled over and over from sheer joy, and scores of dumpy old biddies stood about and cooed over the young bride: "Ah, look at 'er, the love!" The little flower girl, a dream in blue velvet, came in for her share of sighs and smiles. Only one bobby was needed to keep back the throong. It was lovely and chummy, with the wedding party smiling cheerily at the watchers, as though it was really an occasion for general rejoicing and not something solemn and sour-faced. Ah well, I suppose our young Nation will learn one day!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Pam Prime's wedding party, by the way, featured a very successful color scheme. The bridesmaids and matron of honor wore white satin, carried American Beauties and wore shoes and headdresses in the same color. Very lovely! The bride's beautiful mother, however, who is Mrs. Shaw Kennedy Coleman, thundered a 21-gun sartorial salute in cloth of gold with a sable neckpiece . . .

• • • •

On the wedding note, I recently penetrated my old New England stamping ground on a flying visit and attended a bridal shower in Haverhill, Mass., just over the New Hampshire frontier from my home town, and I found such affairs haven't changed one jot since I was a chit of a girl. All the finery, from intimate things to the going-away dress, was laid out on a bed for the girls to finger and admire, and the presents were on the dining-room table. Such things have always had the air of a nuptial wake . . .

Elaine Barrie (once Jacobs), whose stormy career as Ole Jawn Barrymore's Ariel caught the morbid fancy of press and public not so long ago, is actually a trouper at last, playing in a touring company of "The Petrified Forest," at what is said to be $75 the week. There is a report that Mr. B. settled the Barrie matter with a large sum, but no one confirms this . . .

The stunt in opening all these new hotel "rooms" and night clubs is to make the premiere a benefit, and I'm practically the only charity case in New York that hasn't had a cut from at least one of these gaudy affairs. The latest one to explode, the Sapphire Room, on Fifty-seventh street, offered a novelty in the first male society singer, F. N. Lawrence White, who gives out barytone. Society girls have been peeping for pay for several seasons, and now I suppose the lads will begin practicing the scales . . .

The hatless habit is on the increase among local glamour girls. I spied pretty Anne Foster bolting from the Colony and swinging down Madison with her locks in the breeze. Hatless, and smoking coffin nails on the highways, the very curb loafers will soon be yelling "Hi, Pete!" at the gals!

Waves are getting limp in three of our great boroughs, with no less than 4,000 beauty-shop hands on strike for better hours and higher pay. They've been picketing the shops and sassing policemen—and in the meantime their customers have been forced to emigrate to midtown Manhattan for a spot of massage and a little attention to the nails. I'll tell you, we notice it when such really vital matters strike home to us, by jiminy!

Roosevelt Backs Security, 'Balanced Economy' in Pennsylvania Talks

'Pay-Envelope' Tactics of Foes Denounced at Wilkes-Barre

Some Employers and Newspapers Seek to Coerce, Mislead Labor, He Says; Satirizes 'Market-Basket' Enemy Campaign at Harrisburg.

Pennsylvania is at once a great industrial State, a great commercial State, a great mining State and a great agricultural State.

The Pennsylvania farmer—unlike the farmer in the West—can see his own city market within a few hours' drive. And the Pennsylvania industrial worker and merchant know how important to their prosperity is the prosperity of their neighbors, the farmers.

Pennsylvania rightly calls itself the Keystone State. Great tides of immigration have swept over it. Great routes of commerce have crossed it from the very beginning—famous wagon roads and railroads and water routes from the east to the west and the north to the south and back again. Pennsylvania knows that American commerce transcends State lines and becomes interstate and international.

Great Human Problems.

But because Pennsylvania has these great problems of commerce and of industry it has, also, great human problems.

The Machine Age has served well the men and women who use its excellent products. The new problem is to see to it that the Machine Age serves equally well the men and women who run its machines.

This is a problem not for Pennsylvania alone—not even for industry alone. It is a problem for the Nation—and for all kinds of enterprise within the Nation. If modern government is to justify itself, it must see to it that human values are not mangled and destroyed.

You and I know that that is sound morality and good religion. You and I know that it is also good business.

Inevitable Crash.

The simple fact of our dependence upon each other was either unknown or entirely ignored by the Republican leaders of the post-war period. Their doctrine was to give definite help to the top and to utter pious hopes for the bottom. Twelve years of that brought the inevitable crash.

When in 1933 we came to Washington it was our belief that faith without works is dead. We acted—not for a few of us but all of us. That program worked.

But the Republican leadership is still the same. It still preaches the same heresy—class against class and region against region.

You do not need me to tell you this. They say it themselves, loudly, in their market-basket campaign.

In the cities they make promises which they are careful to hide from the farmers. In the rural districts they make promises which they are careful to hide from the city dwellers. In the cities they promise to reduce food prices for the woman who carries the market basket. In the country they promise to raise food prices for the man who grows the contents of that market basket on the farm.

Nice Fairy Story.

That is a nice fairy story. But you and I know that you can't eat your cake in the city and have your cake on the farm. You and I know that after 12 years of that policy there wasn't any cake and there was very little bread. The American people are through with that kind of emptiness.

The prices of farm products have risen since 1932. It's a good thing for all of us that they have risen. We set out deliberately to raise them. It was their rise that helped to start all of us on the road to recovery again. Every home in America has benefited by that.

The prices the farmer was receiving in 1932 were so low that he had no cash income to buy industrial goods made in the cities. That threw people out of work in the cities. Today the farm's products bring more to the farmer. Here in Pennsylvania cash income from farm production was 47 per cent higher in 1935 than in 1932. That is typical of what has happened to farmers throughout the East and throughout the Nation. The farmer is able to buy more from the city. That means more people are at work in the cities, and that in turn means that city dwellers buy more farm produce.

Pocketbook Filled Up.

That is why the consumer's pocketbook has filled up faster than the price of food has gone up. The housewife pays more money for what she buys, but she has more money to buy it with—and she has more money left over after she has bought. Nation-wide facts and figures prove this. Let us take a look at these figures.

From 1929 to 1932 food prices dropped 35 per cent, but understand this: Factory pay rolls in the same period went down 58 per cent. That made a large hole in the worker's market basket.

The average city family paid less for what it bought. But that family had still less with which to buy.

Some retail food prices have risen higher than others. Other food prices have advanced very little. To be fair you have to strike an average. The average advance of food costs since 1932 is 24 per cent—a quarter more than they were four years ago.

Factory Pay Rolls Rise.

But compare that—again using average figures for the country—with the factory pay rolls. These have gone up not 24 per cent, but 77 per cent. And if you take the average of all city dwellers their incomes have gone up faster and farther than food prices have gone up. To sum up—the Republican market basket of 1932 cost less, but the American consumer did not have the cash to fill it. Our market basket in 1936 has much in it because people have money in their pockets to fill it with.

It is true that there is often too wide a spread between what the farmer gets and what the consumer pays. For that neither the farmer nor the consumer is responsible, and both the farmer and the consumer suffer.

We are engaged in solving that difficulty. First, we are vigilant and on guard against monopolies which are contrary to sound public policy even though they are not actually illegal. Second, we are seeking new means to eliminate waste and unnecessary duplication in distribution for the benefit of both producer and consumer.

Interdependence Works.

Through 12 years the Republicans proved that sectionalism will not work. We have proved in 3½ years that interdependence does work.

Giving the farmer of Dauphin or Lancaster County a good break has given a good break to the steel worker of Pittsburgh, the coal miner of Scranton, the white collar or factory worker of Philadelphia, and giving California, Minnesota and Texas a good break gives a good break to Pennsylvania, Ohio and New Jersey.

Ours has been a program of one for all and all for one. That doctrine has given us recovery. Continuing that practice will continue recovery.

Empty Market Basket.

You all remember that good old Republican slogan that was trotted out and polished up for every political campaign—the slogan of "the full dinner pail." And we know that the Republican leaders themselves were responsible for its sad end. The full dinner pail turned out to be the empty market basket.

I know that the American people will not return to power those leaders who emptied the national market basket. I know that the American people will go forward with those who are succeeding in filling it once more.

By the Associated Press.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., October 29. The text of President Roosevelt's speech here today follows:

When I found that I was to speak in Harrisburg today, and realized that it is John Mitchell day, I determined to come by way of Wilkes-Barre. I wanted to pay my tribute to him.

In 1913 I was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. I was asked to examine charges of collusion in coal bids for the Navy. I needed help from some one whose integrity and knowledge I could trust. I recalled then how impressed Theodore Roosevelt had been with John Mitchell's handling of the great coal strike of 1902. I asked John Mitchell to help me. In three days he taught me a great deal about coal and mining. What he taught me saved the United States Navy many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in its coal bill.

You in this anthracite region and miners in every other coal field in the United States, have a fuller picture of this man, who was one of the most significant figures in American labor history. For years he went about the unspectacular but necessary job of clearing the ground for the progress of a great labor movement. He taught a dispersed industry how to organize. He taught both management and labor that the only basis for stability is to be found in contracts that can and will be lived up to by both management and labor.

Ended Defeats.

By victory in the first great battle of the mine workers, he broke the tradition of defeat which had always hung over the aspirations of those he led. He convinced the public that the gains of labor were the gains of all—that the labor movement was something to be welcomed rather than feared. He made public opinion a judge to which labor could more confidently appeal. His work was necessary before other men could do theirs.

We now build upon the work of John Mitchell. He pioneered in his day for collective bargaining. Today we have put upon the Federal statute books the legal mechanism to make collective bargaining a reality.

He pioneered in his day for the education of the public. Today we aim to make the public conscious that the welfare of labor is the welfare of all.

Carrying forward his work and that of others like him, we have begun to build a system of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance to substitute for uncertainty a new security in the life of the wage-earner and his family.

Coercion Resented.

How far we have come is shown by the patriotic resentment with which labor and the public alike are meeting the latest attempts of a handful of employers to mislead and coerce labor with regard to the social security act. Here is repetition of the arrogance and the ruthlessness which the operators utilized to try to break the solid ranks of labor when the miners fought at Armageddon in 1902.

No employer has a right to put his political preferences in the pay envelope. That is coercion even if he tells the whole truth.

But this propaganda, misrepresents by telling only half the truth. Labor and a fair-minded public must place such tactics in a class with the coercion of the strong-arm squad and the whispering of the planted labor spy.

This pay envelope propaganda has one clear objective—to sabotage the social security act. To sabotage that act is to sabotage labor. For that act, as you know, was worked out with labor and enacted with the active support of labor—all kinds of labor.

Employers Must Pay.

Why do these employers seek to repeal the social security act? Because under the act they have to pay for far more than half of the insurance given to the workers.

Get these facts straight:

For that insurance both the employer and the worker pay premiums—just as you pay premiums on any other insurance policy. Those premiums are collected in the form of the taxes you hear so much about.

The first kind of insurance covers old age. Here the employer contributes $1 of premium for every dollar of premium contributed by the worker, but both dollars are held by the Government solely for the benefit of the worker in his old age.

In effect, we have to set up a savings account for the old age of the worker. Because the employer is called upon to contribute on a fifty-fifty basis, that savings account gives exactly $2 of security for every dollar put up by the worker.

Unemployment Aid.

The second kind of insurance is unemployment insurance—to help the worker and his family over the difficult days when he loses his job. For the unemployment security of the worker, the employer under the Federal law puts up the entire premium—$2 The benefits of this insurance go 100 per cent to the worker—none to the employer. But the premiums for this unemployment insurance so far as the Federal Government is concerned are paid 100 per cent by the employer.

Now let's add it all up. Beginning January first, for every $1 which the worker is asked to put into an old-age account for himself, employers are required under the Federal act to contribute $3 to protect the worker from both unemployment and old age. That is, the worker contributes only $1 to his old-age security; he contributes nothing to his security against losing his job. But at the same time the employer has put up $2 for unemployment and $1 for old age.

Three for One!

Three for one! There's the rub. That is what these propaganda-spreading employers object to. The record extending back several years shows that their purpose has always been to compel the worker alone to put up all the premiums both for their unemployment insurance and their old-age insurance. They are now trying to frighten the worker about the worker's $1-premium, so that they won't have to pay their $3-premium.

These propagandists are driven in their desperation to the contemptible, unpatriotic suggestion that some future Congress will steal these insurance funds for other purposes. If they really believe what they say in the pay envelopes, they have no confidence in our form of government or its permanence. It might be well for them to move to some other nation in which they have greater faith.

I know that American workers made wise as well as strong by the achievements of John Mitchell, and his successors will not be fooled by this campaign any more than they were frightened by the strong-arm squads of the past.

John Mitchell taught labor that to win and to preserve the fruits of its victories, it must have a cool head as well as a warm heart. I know labor will refuse to be robbed of its gains—that the progress begun by its friends will be safeguarded and carried forward until the fuller security that is its right is won.

Quotes Lincoln in Delaware.

By the Associated Press.

Save for my own home State of New York, this meeting in Wilmington marks the close of my campaign.

It seems appropriate that on this occasion I should make no political speech because I can better describe the kind of liberty which our Administration has sought and continues to seek, by reading to you the simple words of a great President who believed in that kind of liberty—the great President who preserved the American Union. They are from the speech made by President Lincoln at the Sanitary Fair in Baltimore in 1864:

"The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty, and the American people, just now, are much in want of one. We all declare for liberty; but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing. With some the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself, and the product of his labor; while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men, and the product of other men's labor. Here are two, not only different, but incompatible things, called by the same name, liberty, and it follows that each of the things is, by the respective parties, called byt two different and incompatible names—liberty and tyranny."

I am still reading the words of President Lincoln—

"The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act, as the destroyer of liberty. Plainly, the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of the word liberty; and precisely the same difference prevails today among us human creatures, and all professing to love liberty.

"Hence, we behold the process by which thousands are daily passing from under the yoke of bondage hailed by some as the advance of liberty, and bewailed by others as the destruction of all liberty. Recently, as it seems, the people have been doing something to define liberty, and thanks to them that, in what they have done, the wolf's dictionary has been repudiated."

Those are Lincoln's words, they apply today as they did then. The people of the City of Wilmington and the State of Delaware appreciate their significance in the same measure as men and women in every other part of the Union.

Knox Says 'Waste' Reaches 10 Billion

West Frankfort, Ill., Oct. 29 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, tonight charged that "sheer waste" by the Roosevelt Administration amounts to "ten billions or more."

"Everybody is getting soaked," Knox said. "To waste Government money, and tax the people to pay for it, is immoral and cruel."

The nominees appearance in this southern Illinois soft coal mining center wound up a day of intensive campaigning for the 29 electoral votes of his home State. He made short talks from his special campaign train in Galesburg, Peoria, Bloomington, Champaign, Tuscola, Mattoon, Effingham, Centralia and Benton.

Neither the NRA nor the Guffey coal act, Knox asserted, was in the interest of the workers, and added that the TVA, the Tennessee Valley Authority, developed electric power in States "where miners were already on relief."

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

C. C. Hathaway, personnel officer of the United States Civil Service Commission, is pinch-hitting for Samuel Lubell, The Post's Federal Diarylet, who will be absent from the city for a few days.

By C. C. Hathaway,
Personnel Officer, U. S. Civil Service Commission.

T. R. Genius

Theodore Roosevelt's birthday this week recalls that there are still three officials in the United States Civil Service Commission who served under Roosevelt when he was a Civil Service commissioner.

These are, in order of seniority, Dr. A. R. Butler, the commission's medical officer; Henry A. Hesse, chief of the investigations division, and R. R. Strattan, of the commission's statistical group.

Mr. Strattan is one of the most versatile officials in the service. Among other accomplishments, he is an authority on band music and plans to publish an illustrated book on the subject. He was leader of the Second Regiment Band of the National Guard for many years. He was also a close friend of John Philip Sousa and helped him to arrange scores for some of his famous marches. Mr. Strattan has known personally many men in public life, among these being three to whom he applies the word "genius;" C. F. Marvin, scientific genius, formerly head of the Weather Bureau; John Philip Sousa, musical genius, and, of course, Theodore Roosevelt.

Washingtonians who returned this week from the convention of the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada held at Cincinnati, report that the new president of the National Civil Service Reform League, Robert L. Johnson, is an exceedingly live wire. His program calls for 3,000,000 members for the league.

And speaking of hobbies, Ismar Baruch, chief of the personnel classification division of the Civil Service Commission, has many. Several years ago he began gathering stamps and now has a beautiful collection of "first-day covers." He has a workshop in the basement of his home where he binds books artistically. In the summer he is a gardener.

The recent appearance of the Official Register for 1936 has created interest in its history. It is issued with compliance with an act of Congress and contains the names, titles, legal residence and compensation of officials in the Government service.

In size the present modest volume is but a shadow of the bulky document issued two decades ago. When an economy wave engulfed Washington the old Register was one of the casualties.

There is suspicion in some quarters that employes scan the Register to see what salaries others receive. This is doubtful as such information is a matter of general knowledge in an office and the salaries furnish no news.

The Register serves principally as a reference guide to answer inquiries from the public. It also is consulted not infrequently to verify names of administrators before writing official letters to them.

From the standpoint of economic interest the volume contains far less thrills than the Congressional Directory with its stories of Congressmen who progressed from logs to Legislatures.

Absentee Votes

Notaries in the District report that there is an unprecedented interest this year in absentee voting. The headquarters of the two national parties say that thousands of ballots will be cast by mail from Washington. In addition, hundreds of employes from nearby States and some from a considerable distance will journey home to vote. In a close election, votes of those employed in the District might decide the national verdict.

Incidentally, when all the other national problems are solved, someone might well devise a uniform absentee ballot envelope. They are now of all shapes, sizes and colors, and no two call for the same information. By the time they are signed, countersigned, sealed and mailed, the voter is frequently in a state of collapse. A simpler affidavit would be appreciated by all concerned.

The National Museum reports that much favorable comment has been received from their exhibit at the Texas Centennial Exposition, demonstrating the assembly of the fossil of a dinosaur. This was discovered in northern Utah and is estimated to be 155,000,000 years old. When completed, the specimen will be about 30 feet long and ultimately will be set up in the National Museum with its prehistoric neighbors. Ever so often scientists from the museum discover such animals in the West. It usually takes many months before the specimen can be carefully chipped out of the rock in which it is formed and put in shape for public exhibition.

Numerous questions have arisen in the departments concerning the interpretation of some of the recently adopted leave regulations. In general, the new rules are working well and to the satisfaction of the employes.

Some time clerks are finding the record keeping a puzzling problem. A leave committee appointed by the Civil Service Commission is now working on a uniform leave card which, it is hoped, will iron out some of the current recording problems. This card will not, however, be made available for general use until the calendar year 1938.

Police Trail Woman, Take Five in Raids

Reputed Headquarters of Capital Lottery Boss Is Raided.

Trailing an attractive black-haired woman from an alleged "numbers" establishment in the 200 block of E street northwest, police and a deputy marshal yesterday smashed the reputed headquarters of a local lottery boss.

Armed with warrants from the United States commissioner, members of the vice squad and Clayton D. Gasque, deputy marshal, arrested two men in the E street place, and then followed the alleged "pick-up" agent around a "beat" of nearly 20 other establishments to an elaborate setup in the 1500 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Smashing through a chained door at the Rhode Island avenue establishment, police seized the woman, two other men, a quantity of alleged "numbers" slips, racing paraphernalia, and 46 telephone switches with headsets and standard telephones.

Charges Are Lodged.

The men taken into custody on E street were charged with operating a lottery and conspiracy to operate a lottery. They gave their names as William Reavis, 31, of the 400 block of Second street northwest, and Calvin Cheeks, colored, 20, of the 600 block of Second street northwest.

Two lottery charges and a charge of setting up a gaming table were placed against the men and the woman seized on Rhode Island avenue northeast. They were booked under the names of Sarah Ehrlich, 28, Nicholas James Sakell, 30, both of the Rhode Island avenue address, and Joseph B. McCaffery, 34, of the 400 block of Maryland avenue southwest.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe, who led the raiders, said he had been watching the two establishments for several weeks. Yesterday he applied for the warrants from Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Early yesterday, Sergt. Deyoe said, several "plays" were made in the barber shop on E street. In the afternoon, the Ehlrich woman, driving an expensive sedan, drove up to the place, remained a short while, and then left with an envelope in her hand, Deyoe said.

"We followed her around town to about 20 places," Sergt. Deyoe said.

"Finally," Deyoe said, "she went into the apartment on Rhode Island avenue northeast. We waited a few minutes and then entered. The door was chained and we broke it.

"The two men and the woman were in the flat and we told them it was a raid," Deyoe stated.

Two Switchboards.

In the apartment, two switchboards were found fully equipped to handle hundreds of calls a day. There were 48 switches running from the board to a system of headphones and regular telephones.

"One of our men took several code bets over the telephones while we were in the place," Sergt. Deyoe said.

Also in the place, the raiders said, was a telephone amplifier, a microphone, the alleged "numbers" slips and racing rundown sheets and charts.

Deyoe said the place had been operating for several months. It is situated about 100 yards from the Twelfth Precinct police station at Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue.

Reavis and Cheeks were released under $3,000 bond each while Miss Ehrlich, McCaffery and Sakell posted bail of $4,500 each.

Housing Called Washington's Chief Problem

Dr. Edouard C. Lindemann, of the New York School of Social Work, yesterday declared Washington is one of the poorest housed of the Nation's larger cities. He spoke at the third of a series of four lectures under auspices of the Committee on Volunteer Service of Social Agencies.

Dr. Lindemann named housing as the city's most important social problem.

Other suggestions for improvement of conditions here, he said, are:

"A leisure time program for the entire population, but especially the young people.

"A consultation service for rich and poor alike on the business of line."

Pointing out that the ratio of professional people in Washington who have no intention of having children is far above the average, Dr. Lindemann feels that such a service to young people, carrying them from the time of courtship through marriage and into the establishing of homes and rearing of children would render invaluable aid to the coming generations eugenically and intellectually.

An intelligent method of handling the colored problem was advised by Dr. Lindemann. Confident that a decade of experimentation in handling colored people in the agencies on the same basis as others and without discrimination, Dr. Lindemann said, "In ten years the colored people will develop their own leaders and be able to take care of their own problems."

Presidential Race Aspirant Refused His Old Police Job

As hard put for policemen as is Maj. Ernest W. Brown, he said yesterday he would not consider appointing a Presidential candidate to the force.

Dropping out of the race for Chief Executive, Howard W. Overstreet, former policeman, wrote Maj. Brown asking for his old job back. Overstreet resigned in the first part of the year to run for President.

Maj. Brown said he refused the request for two reasons. Overstreet is over the appointment age limit, and secondly, Maj. Brown said: "I refuse to appoint a Presidential candidate to be a policeman."

School Board Will Be Polled In Kemp Case

Ballou Refuses Comment on Proposal Until Board Acts.

Members of the Board of Education will be polled today or tomorrow on whether or not they want to accept the advice of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal in the case of Lois Kemp.

Seal yesterday recommended to the District Commissioners, who will act on the matter this morning, that the 11-year-old Virginia girl be admitted to the Gordon Junior High School under stipulation that she withdraw voluntarily on January 31, 1937, if the Court of Appeals has not then ruled on the case.

At the same time he proposed that any other children of parents employed in the District, but residing in nearby Maryland or Virginia be accorded the same privilege and on the same condition.

"In view of the fact that the school year already has begun in the District and in States adjoining," Seal said, "and, in view of the fact that I do not believe many pupils will apply for admission at this time, I recommend" the proposal.

Although Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, declined to comment pending action by the board, it was believed that the opinion will be adopted.

Robert E. Lynch, attorney for John S. Kemp, father of Lois, said his client is willing to enter into the stipulation.

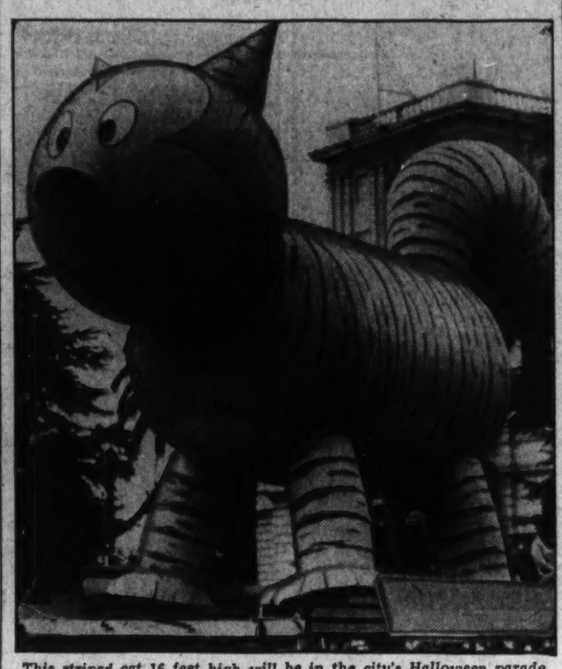
Seal, in a rather lengthy opinion, reviewed the history of the litigation in which Justice Jennings Bailey held that the Board of Eductaion is compelled to admit the children of parents employed in the District.

He pointed out that the noting of an appeal by the District gives the board the right to bar the Kemp girl until the Court of Appeals has made a final determination of the issues involved.

Citing the request of the Kemp counsel for permission to enroll Lois in the Gordon Junior High School pending a final court ruling, Seal said that the matter would be simple were there not an indefinite number of other pupils involved. Admission of Lois, he said, would have no effect on the litigation.

"Dr. Ballou takes the position that the schools are over-crowded," Seal said, "and that there is not sufficient room for pupils whose parents live in the District and in fact says that an emergency exists."

Halloween Cat Not Streamlined



This striped cat 16 feet high will be in the city's Halloween parade tomorrow night.

Halloween Goblins Will Be Led By Giant Man-Made Ghoulies

Witches and hobgoblins, traditionally the most prominent All Hallows' Eve personalities, will be outclassed here this year by man-made ghoulies, it appeared yesterday.

The Greater National Capital Committee, in charge of the annual Halloween parade, announced that inflated balloon-figures, some of them 40 feet long and 14 feet tall, would appear in the Constitution avenue procession starting at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Entered by nine local department stores, the big balloons, which depict clowns, bugs and several of the less well-known types of animals, will form one division of a parade expected to eclipse all previous Halloween celebrations in size. Entries so far include about 5,000 adults and children, 37 floats and 11 bands.

Portillo Is Marshal.

The two entries which best typify the spirit of Halloween will be awarded all-expense trips to New York. Milton Schwab, chairman of the judges' committee, will announce winners of the trips along with other prize winners next Monday.

Among the groups entered in the parade is one from the Buchanan Branch Recreational Club of the Southeast Community Center. Some 350 adults and children will take part, the adults representing farmers and the children dancing pumpkins.

One of the features entered by the civic committee, headed by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, will be a group of several hundred boys from the Boys' Club of Washington, the Merrick Boys' Club and the Northeast Boys' Club.

Playgrounds Unit Large.

Another large unit has been entered by the Playgrounds Department. In addition to the floats, decorated vehicles and marching groups entered by the 30 playgrounds, there will be the following individual marchers:

Georgetown Playground—Harry Azer.

Happy Hollow Playground—Cornie Farrow, Joel Danner, Viza White, Seman Witt.

Father Dalton Is Transferred To Church Here

The Rev. Hugh A. Dalton, S. J., who was pastor of Holy Trinity Church in Georgetown from 1924 until 1930, has been assigned to St. Aloysius Church here, it was learned yesterday. Father Dalton will take up his new duties immediately.

For the past few years Father Dalton has been a curate in St. Peters' Church, Jersey City, N. J., going there from Buffalo, N. Y.

The Jesuit priest left here in October, 1930, to go to St. Ignatius' Church, Chapel Point, Md. Before coming to Washington, he was pastor of the church in Leonardtown, Md.

Born in Philadelphia, Father Dalton was ordained by James Cardinal Gibbons. He was first assigned to St. Francis Xavier Church, New York City, leaving there to become a chaplain in the Army Transport Service during the war.

He afterward returned to the New York parish and remained there until sent to Leonardtown.

Walter Reed Liquor-Store Hearing Is Set

ABC Board Summons Agents of Hospitals to Meeting Friday.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday scheduled a meeting of representatives of the city's hospitals at 2 p. m. next Friday as Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, minister of Foundry M. E. Church, and Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the civic affairs committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, criticized Secretary of War Woodring for his role in issuance of a liquor permit to a store near Wallace Reed Hospital gates.

"When a man prostitutes a high office to debauch human life, the fact that such an official wears the label of one party or another has nothing whatever to do with the judgment which must be passed by those who are ministers of religion and, therefore, ministers to humanity.

"That an acting member of the President's Cabinet should without argument or reason override the protests of doctors and hospital authorities and by his influence insist on the selling of intoxicating liquor at the very gates of an Army-controlled institution is a spectacle which reveals public office at its lowest level.

"The answer of the church must be, no matter whose Administration you belong to, you cannot do that and expect the silence of the Christian Church. The sooner his place at the Cabinet table is occupied by one worthy of that circle of advisers around the President the better. That a Cabinet member should take such an attitude in a day when this country, as the drink consumption mounts, is reeling and staggering to a tomorrow of broken bodies and ruined souls, suggests the anxious question, has democracy really failed?"

"It is bad enough to have liquor sold throughout the Nation's Capital," LaRoe wrote to Woodring. "It is bad enough to have thousands of men crippled and wounded by war, but the limit has been reached when a responsible officer of the Government, himself a servant of the people, overrules hospital authorities in their effort to protect these men against the ravages of hard liquor.

"You have virtually said that the Government looks with favor upon the sale of whisky near military hospitals even when the responsible officers in charge, who are familiar with the particular problem, seek to prevent such sale.

"This conclusion necessarily follows from your letter to the ABC board asking that the recommendation of the Walter Reed authorities be ignored. The whole Christian community is deeply hurt by your action."

The purpose of the meeting scheduled for next Friday is to ascertain the majority sentiment of hospital authorities on a proposal that liquor stores be prohibited from operating within a specified distance from any hospital.

Buying Lifts Prices Of Copper and Lead

New York, Oct. 29 (AP).—The price of lead was boosted to the highest level since 1930 and export copper reached a new five-year top under a further wave of buying in metals markets today.

Lead was advanced $2 a ton by St. Joseph Lead Co. and American Smelting & Refining Co. The former named 4.85 cents a pound New York and 4.65 cents East St. Louis, and the later 4.80 cents New York and 4.65 cents East St. Louis.

These prices, metal, authorities said were the highest witnessed since December, 1930, when the market was 5.10 cents a pound New York.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Attain Higher Level in Moderate Trading; Bonds Firm; Wheat Lower.

New York, Oct. 29.—Stocks toed up a little in moderate trading and the Government bond list looked firmer. Without any parades but with plenty of political speeches the feeling of speculative markets was unchanged on the election. This is to say, most people felt reasonably confident and hoped for the best. December wheat closed a cent lower at 114⅜ cents a bushel.

Stock traders showed the same penchant for turning to amusements in times of uncertainty as do other people when they find the situation a little too much for them. Motion picture company shares continued to mount, probably on the theory that no matter who is elected nobody is going to stop going to the movies, and few will give up their automobiles until the last paper dollar is created and spent at Washington. Store stocks were strong. Marshall Field was a leader. Montgomery Ward, with a dividend meeting set for today, advanced to a new high price.

Motor shares were steady, but were not unusually popular. Some further ventures at hedging the election in the low-priced public utility holding company shares were undertaken. Commonwealth & Southern and United Corporation were active, with little change in price. Steels were steady to firm.

Irregularly higher prices with small fractional changes were the rule for the rubber, chemical, railroad equipment and motor accessory stocks. Metal shares moved forward. Rails were mixed. Santa Fe hardened. Delaware & Hudson, New York Central and Pennsylvania found buyers. Union Pacific dropped nearly 2 points.

Oils in Demand.

The oil group was a feature, with Socony-Vacuum well backed on a large turnover. Standard recovered to its recent high price. Individual favorites were Allis Chalmers, Alleghany, Borg-Warner, Collins & Aikman, Commercial Credit, Commercial Investment Trust, Diesel Wemmer, Fajardo, Hollander, Libbey-Owens-Ford, Penn-Dixie Cement preferred, St. Joseph Lead, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Universal Leaf, Western Union and Waukesha Motor.

Odds and ends of industrial and financial news were plentiful. They included more extra dividend payments, some good earnings reports and a Federal Reserve Bank report of an 8 per cent gain in October retail sales in this district as compared with last year. However, politics continued to dominate the market situation. So busy were the various heads of Government with election of New Deal candidates that here and there unfortunate strayings from proper reservations could be noted.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, for example, has not built up a great reputation as a financial genius in his frequent essays on Government finance. Just the same his attempts uncovered genius as compared with the current remarks of Attorney General Cummings. Mr. Cummings apparently has not looked deeply into the authorities when he observes that, under present conditions, "the best test of whether a government is sound and solvent is the price which investors are willing to pay for its bonds."

That may be true enough if investors are free to show their views. As it is, the banks have no other outlet for excess funds than the Government bond market. It is a case of take that or starve, and they have been frequently warned by the authorities that subscriptions are a good thing. The banks already are virtually under the Treasury's complete control, and furthermore, the Treasury stands ready at all times to come in as a buyer in order to support falling prices.

The depreciation in Government bonds—from 18 to 20 per cent—as Mr. Cummings says, took place in a Republican administration. He therefore makes the amazing assertion that it meant, when in a time of high prosperity and with a public debt about half that of the present, the Government's credit was stronger than it now is. Actually, of course, it meant that business was so prosperous that money could not be drawn out of industry and into low coupon bonds except at prices that would show a fair return. Simply on the basis of confidence of investors in the Government's ability to pay, Government bonds would have sold a few years ago at extremely high prices; but money goes where the returns are highest.

If the New Deal succeeds in holding down industrial recovery indefinitely, it may indefinitely keep up the price of Government bonds—until the public debt becomes) so high that not even the administration can fool anybody any longer. In that case the lack of confidence in Government credit will be shown in rapidly depreciating currency. If business does continue to move ahead, and if the budget is brought into balance, Government bonds will follow the course of interest rates.

Insured Banks' Figures.

In a detailed analysis of the condition of 14,059 insured banks, State and National, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reveals that the banks' holdings of Government securities June 30 were $14,772,000,000, which is 31.6 per cent of the total deposits of $46,625,000,000. Probably this will be the peak for a long time, since the banks are now letting go Government issues in considerable volume. At the end of last December FDIC reported holdings of Government securities by insured banks at $13,275,000,000, which was exactly 30 per cent of their $44,125,000,000 total deposits on that date. The ratio of insured banks' holdings of Government bonds and notes to the total national debt is around 46 per cent. Counting uninsured commercial and savings banks' holdings, and the holdings of the Reserve banks, the bank-owned portion of the national debt is still around 50 per cent of the total.

Equitable Life Holds Classes For D.C. Agents

By Thomas M. Cahill

E. L. Kurtz, of the New York office of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, is conducting a two weeks' field school for the members of the Washington agency. This annual school has for many years been a part of the careful training of agents for which the Equitable is well known in insurance circles. Eligibility for attendance at the school is based on satisfactory completion of other preliminary courses of training offered by the society.

E. L. KURTZ.

The first week of the school is being devoted to discussion of the fundamentals of life insurance and the reasons for its stability. The responsibility of the agent to the public he serves is also stressed. During the second week, problems confronting the more experienced agent will be discussed. Some of the subjects to be covered include income insurance, planning insurance, estates and business insurance. The societies experience over the last 15 years has proved conclusively the many advantages that accure to the agent and the public through careful and thorough training of agents.

Field schools are held each year in every Equitable agency throughout the country and statistics show the trained agent who received additional education from them earns on an average more than twice as much as the untrained agent. David S. Behune, who for many years has been manager of the Washington agency, stated that his agency paid for more business during September than for any previous September in the history of the agency. A campaign is now in progress as a tribute to VicePresident W. W. Klingman, and business written so far indicates that October will be an even better month than the record-breaking September.

Buckley Re-elected.

Robert E. Buckley, president, National Permanent Building Association, was re-elected president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League at its annual meeting this week. Other officers re-elected were: Arthur G. Bishop, president, District Lawyers and Washington Title Insurance Cos., vice president; Millard T. Dixon, National Permanent Building Association, secretary; C. Clinton James, Columbia Permanent Building Association, counsel. Total assets of the 20 member associations were reported by Acting Secretary F. Willson Camp as more than $107,000,000, an increase of $10,000 for the year.

R. E. BUCKLEY.

Work of the District of Columbia Bankers Association for the administrative quarter was reviewed by President Karl W. Corby of the organization at its fall meeting this week. Every member bank was represented at the meeting. A steady improvement in banking conditions was reported.

Chairman Thomas J. Groom, of the special committee studying fiscal relations between the Federal Government and the District pertaining to proposed taxation methods, reported for this group. Other members of this committee are Lanier P. McLachlen, Francis G. Addison, jr., and Robert V. Fleming. Tribute was paid to the memory of the late George L. Starkey, president of National Bank of Washington at the time of his death, in resolutions adopted at the meeting. Wilmer J. Waller, H. H. McKee, Charles H. Doing and George O. Vass formed the resolutions committee.

The meeting was addressed by Walter R. Gardner, chief of the international finance section of the Federal Reserve Board's division of research. Mr. Gardner was technical assistant to the London Conference on Currency and Stabilization in 1933. Insignia for meritorious service were presented to Chairman Millard S. Yeatman, auditors section; James A. Soper, fiduciaries section, and John F. Hillyard, safe-deposit section.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 29.—Zinc production is an important barometer of business activity. Although less zinc was produced in September than in August the decline was seasonal. September production, however, passed a year ago by 16½ per cent, while refinery stocks have dropped 39 per cent from a year ago.

3.573 Billion Issues Filed In Nine Months

Analysis of statements registered under the securities act during the three months ended September 30, 1936, indicates that securities with estimated gross proceeds of $909,026,000 became fully effective, thereby bringing the total of registrations for the first nine months of 1936 to $3,573,973,000. During the third quarter of 1935 $1,104,411,000 of securities had been effectively registered, which brought the total for the January 1-September 30 period to $1,769,750,000.

For the July 1-September 30, 1936, period, utility companies were the largest registrants, with a total of $288,119,000 of securities, representing 31.7 per cent of the total registrations for the quarter. Only slightly smaller were the registrations of the financial and investment companies, which aggregated $277,250,000, or 30.5 per cent. Manufacturing companies' registrations were third in size, with $232,927,000 of securities, representing 25.6 per cent of the quarter's total.

Virginia Pulp & Paper Lifts Wages 10 Per Cent

New York, Oct. 29 (AP).—The more than 5,000 employes of West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. will get a 10 per cent pay raise effective December 1, Thomas Luke, president, said today.

He said the company, which has plants in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, will retain the 40-hour week for all employes.

Bethlehem 3d Quarter Net Seven-Year Top

Directors to Consider Early Dividend on Common.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Directors of Bethlehem Steel Croporation today declared regular dividends on both preferred stocks and reported the highest third-quarter net income since 1929.

For the third quarter net income increased to $4,595,058, equal to 94 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $3,431,391, or 49 cents a share, in the second quarter and $701,816 in the third quarter of 1935.

Commenting on the report, Eugene R. Grace, president, said that a study of the figures has led officials of the company to the conclusion that if wages should or must be raised the money would have to come from increased steel prices.

He added that because of the undistributed profits tax and the fact that Bethlehem would have about $5,000,000 available after dividends on the preferred stock at the end of the year, the board might in December give consideration to a distribution on the common stock.

The dividends of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and of 25 cents a share on the 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock are payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 4.

Keen Debates Forecast at A.A.U. Meet

Mahoney May Run for Presidency; Hopes for Harmony.

Feels That Mistake Was Made Participating in Last Olympics.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—The 1936 convention of the Amateur Athletic Union in Houston, Tex., in December, won't be a Donny-Brook affair like last year's session if Jeremiah T. Mahoney can help it.

The former president, who lost a bitterly waged battle to keep the United States out of the Olympic games, said today he hopes the keynote of the convention will be harmony, but he won't sidestep any issues "if the boys want to fight."

"I never duck a fight, physically or otherwise, and I don't intend to start dodging one now," said the New York attorney who spent 20 years as a General Sessions Court and Supreme Court judge.

Mahoney doesn't believe the Olympic games or a discussion of any of the incidents that occurred in Berlin have a place in the A. A. U. convention except where "criticism was unfairly aimed at the A. A. U. when it belonged to the Olympic officials," such as in the celebrated "Jarrett case" and the dropping of two Jewish runners, Marty Glickman and Sam Stoller, from the 400-meter relay team.

Lost Identity.

"Certainly, many officials of the A. A. U. were members of various Olympic committees, but as such, for the time being, they lost their identity with the A. A. U.," said Mahoney. "The A. A. U., not the Olympic committee, suffered from the criticism. Whatever happens in Berlin has no place on the convention floor, but you can't tell what some fellows will bring up."

As far as Mahoney can see, there's nothing on the agenda that should precipitate a fresh outbreak between the pro and anti-Olympic forces which lined up last year and came perilously close to disrupting the ruling body of amateur sport in this country.

"I'm for anything that will create harmony," said Mahoney. "The Olympic games are over. I still feel we made a mistake in participating in view of the conditions in Germany, but now let us prepare for and face the future."

Controversy at Houston may develop over election of a successor to Avery Brundage, of Chicago, as president. Mahoney stepped down from the presidency when he lost the Olympic boycott battle. Maj. Patrick J. Walsh, of New York, was slated for the executive chair, but he stepped aside for Brundage.

At Berlin last summer Brundage was elected an American member of the International Olympic committee, realizing a long-cherished ambition. He still retains a deep interest in the future of the A. A. U., but no longer is interested in piloting it. Thus, again it becomes the turn of Vice President Walsh, who probably will have strong administration support.

"If Walsh is a candidate for the presidency, I shall oppose him," Mahoney said bluntly. "I am not a candidate for the office, although around 30 sectional associations already have appealed to me to run for office. If I am drafted I will serve.

"I am ready to support any man who can show a substantial backing and is dedicating his services to the ideals and principles for which I fight."

Florida Coach Thinks Team May Defeat Terps

Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 29 (AP).—Coach Josh Cody watched his Florida football team run through its last hard practice of the week today, then came as close to an outright prediction as he has been all season.

"The boys haven't been keyed up for any game so far and if they arouse themselves we have a chance to take Maryland," he said.

Every regular will be ready for duty.

Friends Beats Alban's.

The Friends School 90-pound class football team defeated the St. Alban's 90-pounders, 6 to 0, yesterday on the Friends Field. Friends won the game on a 35-yard march after Bill Cafritz recovered a St. Alban's fumble of a punt on the Saints' 35-yard line. Successive gains by Al Dultan took the leather to the 3-yard line and Bob Fergus went over for the touchdown.

Risko

Called Strike Two On Fight Experts In Balsamo Victory

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 29.—Fight experts, foremost the Broadway variety, today felt like Manager Joe Jacobs when he uttered these classic words in painful disgust:

"I should have stood in bed."

For the second time this year, the usually shrewd observers along cauliflower alley did one of the greatest "building up" jobs known in ring history with their adjectives and superlatives but for the second time their human structure crashed in defeat before their eyes.

First, it was Joe Louis, the "invincible Brown Bomber" who was so invincible that Max Schmeling made him look like an amateur.

Last night, it was Harry Balsamo, the "Battering Brakeman" from New York's Little Italy, who did the experts wrong by looking like a preliminary boy against Eddie (Babe) Risko in Promoter Jacobs' Hippodrome punch bowl.

Somehow, we don't blame the experts as much as we do the boxing promoters' press agents, who are getting so good they are hard to resist. Their copy is so readable that a fight expert has a hard time improving on it. For instance, before Balsamo met Risko, former middleweight champion, who was knocked out by Jock McAvoy in one round, Promoter Jacobs' head press agent, Walter St. Denis, turned out a human interest story on the latest middleweight fighting sensation.

"Harry Balsamo, the battering brakeman from Little Italy," read the piece, "was a fighter by nature. He always loved to get in mixups in the street, but it was on the advice of his late father that he managed to change his course and applied his power to ring contests instead of street brawls.

"Today he is the most talked of fighter in the world . . . Young Harry Balsamo was made of tough stock. He is most powerful . . . He's a game youngster who never shirked his work. Those hands of his are regarded as the most perfect of any man who ever pulled on a pair of boxing gloves. There is not a flaw in his make-up.

"Harry is a frugal lad. He has been married only six months. He saved his money when he was working and had a nice bank roll when he led his girl to the altar. He saves everything he grabs."

Walter wound up his piece by calling attention to the fact that Harry has lived in the same neighborhood on Pleasant avenue and 119th street and doesn't think he'll ever get high-hatted enough to move out of the district.

After watching Harry last night, it might be added here and now that the brakeman will be lucky to move out of his neighborhood. Risko gave him a terrific beating, winning every round.

Joke Is on Cards If Dean Is Sold—Or So Says Dean

By the United Press.

Bradenton, Fla., Oct. 29.—Jerome Herman Dean, the dizzy St. Louis Cardinal star, and Branch Rickey, vice president of the Cards, mixed verbal punches tonight in a duel equal to any staged in the old days by Babe Ruth and Col. Jake Ruppert.

News that Rickey is ready to place him on the auction block with a $500,000 price tag attached brought Diz out of the seclusion of golf courses and fishing rendezvous roaring with indignation.

If Rickey asks half a million for his services in a deal with another club, Dizzy is going to get $50,000 of it for himself or know the reason why, he said.

If he doesn't—well, he can earn a living playing golf.

"If they go tryin' to sell me to any second-division club, the joke's gonna be on Rickey. Without me, the Card'll be down there in the second division themselves."

The self-admitted greatest of all Deans said he doesn't have to play baseball for a living.

"I won over $1,800 last year playing golf, and if they don't give me what I ask, I'll just stay down here, eat steaks and play golf and fish," he said. "I shot a 75 yesterday over the Bobby Jones course at Sarasota and on the sixteenth hole—210 yards—I was hole high off the tee with a No. 5. Yes sir, I can play golf all right."

Devitt Prep Beats Mt. St. Mary's Frosh

Frederick, Md., Oct. 29.—A heavier Devitt Prep football team from Washington handed the Mount St. Mary's freshmen eleven its first defeat of the season today at Emmitsburg, 13 to 0. The visitors took advantage of two costly fumbles by Frank Leahy, on the Mountaineers' 5-yard line to score both touchdowns. Cohen hit tackle both times to score.

The Mountaineer yearlings twice worked to within 10 yards of the Devitt goal line on passing attacks, but were held for downs.

Wildcats Take Off Wraps for Gophers

Northwestern Has Kept Its Heavy Artillery Silent Thus Far.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Northwestern's heaviest gridiron artillery, silent all season, will roar against Minnesota Saturday in full fury.

This Northwestern has mowed down four opponents using a half-dozen plays. The Wildcats have tricky elaborations and other stuff that Minnesota's eagle-eyed scouts have not seen. Waldorf has kept them a squad secret.

Every secret the Wildcats have, everything in the arsenal, will be touched off before a throng of 47,000, all Dyche Stadium will hold, in the battle that figures to settle the Big Ten championship and may alter the national "title" situation.

Against Iowa, North Dakota State and Illinois, the Northwestern won on excellent kicking and power smashes inside the tackles. Coming from behind to conquer Ohio State, the Wildcats were forced to unlimber heavier guns, and demonstrated they had them by executing a smart lateral-forward passing play for the winning touchdown.

Wildcats Have 22 Reliables.

Where Minnesota has a legion of stars—Andy Uram, Rudy Gmitro, Bud Wilkinson, Dwight Reed, Ray King and the rest—22 Wildcats will share the terrific burden of trying to halt the Gophers' winning streak short of 22 straight. Waldorf has a big squad, but against the Nation's ranking football power, only a few more than the top 22 belong on the same field with Bierman's mighty men.

Friends Deny Harlow Sick Of Harvard

Published reports that Dick Harlow is so "utterly disappointed" with conditions at Harvard that he hopes to obtain a release from contract and return to Western Maryland, were indignantly denied last night by friends of the well-known coach and ornithologist, and alumni of the Maryland school.

"Why, it is absolutely ridiculous," one stated, "to say that Dick is disgusted when he took the Harvard position knowing that he would have to build from the ground up, but also with the full confidence and co-operation of Harvard authorities.

"He didn't expect to have a good team this year, nor do Harvard alumni expect him to. It is a long, hard grind, but Dick will develop a winner for the Crimson just as he did at Western Maryland, where his debut was not marked by an auspicious display of power or undefeated season.

Stack of Telegrams.

"He received a stack of telegrams fully 2 feet high, all voicing confidence in his ability, after one of the team's defeats, and if his boys whip Yale, and they are pointing for that game, you can bet that all previous losses will be forgotten.

"Another thing fans and sports writers are prone to forget is that all Harvard students, and that includes football players, must pass an entrance examination, and a mighty stiff one, and it virtually is impossible to import a team of scholarship men for the sake of a winning football team. Another thing, no one, not even Harlow's most intimate friends, know the exact terms or text of his contract.

"'Penn State wanted Dick last year, and even this year is still after him for director of athletics, for Hugo Bezdek is anxious to retire from the sports field. So, it's silly to say Dick is anxious to return to Western Maryland. We all would like to see him back coaching the team, but you can mark it down now that he isn't coming."

Vanderbilt Will Build America Cup Defender

New York, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Harold S. Vanderbilt, who defended the historic trophy for the United States in 1930 and 1934, will build, equip and maintain a defender for the America's Cup, Commodore W. A. W. Stewart, of the New York Yacht Club announced today.

Vanderbilt will pay all expenses for the project, the first time since 1887 that an individual has underwritten a cup defense.

Barabas to Get Leading Role Tomorrow

Shifty Back Will Earn Job as Regular if He Does Well in Tilt Today.

Signor Tony Barabas, the spidery-legged gent who is on the verge of blossoming into Georgetown's ace ball carrier, ran around for a while in practice yesterday at the Hilltop, and in so doing ran around, through and over a bewildered freshmen team for three touchdowns in another scrimmage session.

Running like Johnny Bozek, the Hoya hoofer of a few years back who made it seem as if it were all done by mirrors, Barabas loped along at an easy pace until threatened, then pushed the accelerator down to the floor and glided away like a whippet outrunning a toy bulldog.

Barabas will be turned loose against Shenandoah tomorrow at Griffith Stadium, and even though the competition doesn't figure to be much, Coach Jack Hagerty believes it will give him a long-awaited opportunity of getting a final line on his converted back. Hagerty was timid about using Tony earlier in the season because the boy looked bad defensively, but in the N. Y. U. game he outshone his mates in this department executing his assignments in expert fashion.

If Barabas goes well against the Virginians he virtually is assured of a starting role against West Virginia the following week, but he isn't the only one. Wychunas, Dooley and Moulin, who will start in the backfield with Tony tomorrow, have the same opportunity, and it holds good with linemen as well. Hagerty, in effect, has declared all of the first string jobs open to debate, and one or two of the boys have a genuine chance of making good.

Two Changes In Line-up Are Made

Pixlee Has No Hopes of Keeping Rival Team From Scoring.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Still en Route to Texas, Oct. 29. Not visibly impressed by the fact that they had practiced in the first concrete stadium built in America when they stopped off at St. Louis this afternoon, the George Washington football squad tonight was on the last leg of its journey to Houston and the Rice game Saturday.

Head Coach Jim Pixlee sent his unbeaten team through a 90-minute workout on the Washington University field which in 1904 was part of the World Fair grounds and the scene of the third renewal of the Olympic games.

The workout revealed two changes in the G. W. line-up. At both guard posts, the players who started last week's game against Wake Forest were missing. At left guard, Izzy Weinberg replaced Tom Stapleton and at right guard Renzaglia has succeeded Cottingham.

Spread Plays in Order.

Nettled by the failure of the Colonials to score from the two-yard line on four downs last Friday night at Griffith Stadium, Line Coach Botchy Kotch made the changes at guard and has been gratified by the spirited play of Weinberg and Renzaglia in practice this week.

Pixlee tonight bared his battle plans for the Rice game, which looms as the last serious obstacle between George Washington and an unbeaten season.

"We can hardly hope to keep Rice from scoring," said Pixlee.

"They've got too much power. But we're going to try to outscore 'em. We haven't opened up yet. Those spread plays we're using gained us a lot of ground last week, and if we have to run every play from a spread formation on Saturday we're going to do it."

Pixlee is not permitting himself to be misled by the fact that Rice this season is without its two star performers in the backfield—Bill Wallace and Tom McCauley—who led the Rice team to its 41-0 victory over the Colonials last year. His scouts report that Rice is virtually as strong this season.

"They may not have McCauley and Wallace," said Pixlee, "but there are a couple of backs named Friedman and Schuehle we've been warned about. Look at G. W. We don't have Tuffy Leemans this season, but we're a stronger team despite that fact. I'm not looking for anything soft in Rice. Look what they did to Texas."

As the Colonials went through

Tuneful Pays Record $151 Mutuel

Gay Balko, $8, Rideaway, $9, Take First and Second Races.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 29.—War Emblem, son of Big Blaze, scored his first victory of the year in the fourth race which served feature purposes on today's program of the Maryland Fair, Inc. With Jockey Eddie de Camillis doing the booting, War Emblem set his own pace and bounded to the finish line two lengths in front of Bijuro and Albania, members of the Mrs. Emil Denemark entry.

War Emblem ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 3-5 and paid a $5.90 mutuel.

A field of 11 marched postward, and War Emblem, off in the first flight, had taken the lead before the group reached the backstretch. Both of the Denemark horses were close up and under slight restraint. Their riders evidently were waiting for War Emblem to stop. However, the colt stuck to his guns and the drive of the Denemark jockeys could not dislodge him.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Gay Balko galloped to an easy victory in the 6-furlong opener. Gay Balko made every post a winning one and had an advantage of two and a half lengths over Frisco Kid at the finish. Fond Memories was third in the field of a dozen juveniles. Good Trade, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, broke his leg while racing prominently in the stretch and was destroyed. Gay Balko was clocked in 1:13 2-5 and paid an $8.10 mutuel.

Gladys Whitney's Rideaway, carrying top weight of 151 pounds, won the day's steeplechase event by two lengths from Mrs. V. T. Winmill's Chalice, with Mrs. D. A. Buckley's Head Hunter a distant third. Martinious struck the beacon leaving the twelfth fence and lost rider. However, Jockey J. McGrath remounted and finished the course to take fourth money. Saluda, Thomas Hitchcock's gelding and heavily played favorite, fell at the tenth fence. Rigan McKinney, gentleman rider, was not injured. The winner paid a $9 mutuel and was timed in 3:54 4-5 for the 2-mile course.

Joyride Pays $11.90.

Joyride, owned and operated by M. A. Smith, won the third race, a 6-furlong sprint, by three parts of a length from O. Blank's My Surprise. The camera was used to bring third money to My Kin. Jockey Joe Renick rode the winner, which shook off Cruising entering the stretch and had to be strongly ridden to stave off the closing bid of My Surprise. A field of 12 competed. Joyride paid an $11.90 mutuel, completed a $31.50 daily double and was clocked in 1:13 1-5.

San Antioca, running in the colors of Jefferson Davis Cohn, took the fifth race from a field of five with the greatest of ease. She had a 5-length lead on Xandra at the finish. Third money went to Chrysmute. San Antioca paid a $7.50 mutuel and ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:46 1/5.

The Ascot stable's Fogarty put on his copyrighted stretch rush to win the sixth race by a length and a half from the Shandon Farm's Ashen. Skyride, which set the pace most of the way, lasted to be third. Jockey Jackie Westrope gave Fogarty a good ride. The gelding ran the mile and a furlong in 1:53 1/5 and paid a $5.70 mutuel in the favorite role.

Tuneful Pays $151.10.

Irish Vote, ridden by Eddie Smith, took the seventh race over the mile and a quarter route while running in the colors of A. Nader. The Westy Hogan gelding defeated More Pep by a length with Jimmy D. two lengths away. The winner paid $14.10 and was clocked in 2:07 3-5.

Tuneful, a 75--to-1 shot, who had shown nothing since winning at Cumberland, returned the largest mutuel of the Laurel season, by winning the eighth race. Tuneful, in front from the start, paid $151:10 to win, $41.00 to place and $19.80 to show. Mad Frump, the favorite, was second, and Rollick, third.

Furman-Davidson Tilt Tomorrow Is Shifted

Greenville, S. C., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Athletic officials of Furman University announced tonight that the Furman-Davidson football game originally scheduled for Manly Field here Saturday would be played in the new Sirrine Stadium.

The move was made to accommodate a crowd which indications now show would tax the old athletic field on the University campus. The new stadium is nearby.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY BALKO, $8.10, $4.70, $3.00; FRISCO KID, $10.10, $5.80; FOND MEMORIES, $4.40.
GAY BALKO had speed to go to the top at once, opened a gap on TRUE TUNE approaching the stretch and easily held FRISCO KID safe in the closing stages. FRISCO KID worked his way to the leaders swinging for the stretch and came with a rush at the end. FOND MEMORIES, outrun to the stretch, came with good energy under strong handling. TRUE TUNE faltered after chasing the pacemaker. NADIR went evenly and had no excuses. CATOMAR closed stoutly from a slow beginning. DISOWN and TAGLIN were forced to pull up when GOOD TRADE broke his leg approaching the sixteenth pole.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIDEAWAY, $9.00, $4.10, $3.20; CHALICE, $5.50, $3.10; HEAD HUNTER, $3.60.
RIDEAWAY, under restraint and fencing well, gained steadily on CHALICE when placed to drive approaching the twelfth fence, gained the lead after the final fence and was driving at the end. CHALICE opened a long lead approaching the third fence, landed badly at the sixth and fourteenth fences and was tiring at the finish. HEAD HUNTER raced greenly and swerved repeatedly. He was pulled up during the last half mile. MARTINIOUS struck the beacon leaving the twelfth fence and lost rider. He was remounted and completed the course for fourth money. SALUDA fell at the tenth fence.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOYRIDE, $11.90, $5.20, $3.60; MY SURPRISE, $4.20, $2.90; MY KIN, $3.40.
JOYRIDE shook off repeated challenges from CRUISING to take definite command entering the stretch, but had to be kept to a stout drive to hold MY SURPRISE safe. The latter, close to the pacemakers throughout, rallied to punishment in the final stages and was wearing the winner down at the end. MY KIN, forwardly placed throughout, came gamely at the finish. CRUISING tired gradually after showing high early speed while running lapped on the winner. FLAVOR made a mild bid entering the stretch. BETTY SHAW closed some ground from a slow start. BRANDON MINT went evenly. TOM'S BOY had early speed.

WAR EMBLEM assumed command swinging for the backstretch, was steadied along while gradually opening a gap on BIJURO and was kept to a strong hand ride to hold advantage to the finish. BIJURO chased the pacemaker and closed gamely. ALBANIA, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, responded to punishment and was going willingly at the end. KIMPTON raced evenly. PHANTOM FOX gained steadily from a slow beginning. TREBIZONDE dropped out of it after a half. The others were outrun.

SAN ANTIOCA, showing much improvement over last effort, was allowed to settle into a stride, was sent to the outside when ready, moved around leaders to take command and easily held away thereafter. XANDRA, outrun for a half, came with a belated rush in the stretch. CHRYSMUTE was in tight quarters along the rail in the stretch. BONNIE LOIS swung out at the turn, held a brief lead at the far turn and dropped back. FLUFFY LEE stopped after setting the pace under hustling tactics. KNIGHTS FANCY was carried wide by BONNIE LOIS at the first turn.

FOGARTY, allowed to settle into stride as usual and a trailer to the backstretch, improved his position sharply when placed to drive and came with a rush in the stretch to dispose of ASHEN. The latter was hard ridden to take command over SKYRIDE entering the stretch and tired gradually thereafter. SKYRIDE faltered after setting a brisk pace. THE MAULER moved up menacingly along the backstretch, but tired. LITTLE ARGO went evenly, but could not threaten. TELL IT had good early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRISH VOTE, $14.10, $5.00, $4.10; MORE PEP, $2.90, $2.60. JIMMY D., $8.90.
IRISH VOTE, closer than usual during the early running, moved up sharply approaching the far turn, took command and had to be kept to a stout drive to hold MORE PEP safe. The latter, within striking distance of the leaders, rallied when placed to drive and was wearing down the winner at the end. JIMMY D. ran WITTEKIND into defeat to take the lead, but tired gradually. DRASTIC DELIGHT, allowed to settle into stride, moved up menacingly approaching the stretch, but hung thereafter. CANDLE FLY dropped far out of it and came with a belated rush. APATHY had early speed. WITTEKIND quit.

TUNEFUL sprinted to the front at once, opened a gap, was given a breathing spell at the far turn and held away over MAD FRUMP through the stretch. MAD FRUMP, within striking distance of the leaders, moved up to press the pace and closed willingly. ROLLICK improved his position steadily, but hung at the finish. BALMACAN dropped out of it, but closed willingly. MAPLE MINT was racing forwardly when he broke down approaching the far turn.

Loyola Coach Fears Drubbing From Catholic U. Team Tonight

Local Eleven Has Margin In Weight

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 29.—Catholic University's favored football squad arrived in town late this afternoon in fine spirits and ready for the battle Friday night with the Loyola Wolves. They came in from Hammond, La., where they have had their headquarters since Monday morning.

Coach A. J. "Dutch" Bergman, who preceded his players here by a day, reported them in tiptop physical condition and said that he planned no changes in his regular line-up. "We'll start with the same team that has lined up against our last four opponents this year," was his comment.

"We have been working out twice a day for the past several days, lightly in the morning and a little heavier in the afternoon," Bergman explained. "Twice we had spirited scrimmages with the Southeastern Louisiana College boys."

Tonight the Cardinals went through a light workout under the arc lights of Loyola Stadium in order to acquaint themselves with playing under the artificial lighting. It is Catholic U's first night game this season.

Loyola Coach Pessimistic.

Coach Eddie Reed of Loyola, who witnessed the drill, was impressed with the weight and size of the visitors. He expressed the opinion that the Catholic U. team this year was the biggest to ever show on the local gridiron. He fears the worst when his crippled Wolfpack engages these huskies who have not allowed a score through their line in two years.

Clay Calhoun, plunging fullback of the locals, seems to hold the key to the game. It has been his pile-driving bucks through opposing lines that has proved Loyola's biggest ground-gaining medium. It was his plunging that scored on Alabama for the first time this season. If he can penetrate the Cardinal forward wall with any degree of success, Loyola feels it has a chance. If he is throttled, the pack is in for a licking. Eddie Daigle, the fastest back in the South, is also available, but he has not been at his best, due to injuries. These two will be the main hopes for a Loyola victory.

Is Second Meeting.

"Irish" Carroll and Bill Adamaitis, according to Coach Bergman, are expected to again carry the brunt of Catholic's attack. He has much praise for these two ball carriers.

There may be changes in Loyola's line-up. Ray Staub and Buster Costanza, regular ends, are doubtful starters and Paul Beach and Chad Stewart may move up to their places. Cecil Sanders, quarterback who did not play against Alabama last week, is still on the hospital list. His place is being held down by Bob Murphy.

The game tomorrow night is the second between the two schools, Catholic U. and Loyola first met in 1926, when the latter had an undefeated and untied eleven that led the entire country in scoring. Loyola won, 6-0.

The probable line-ups:

Stewart	L.E.	Schmarr
Peteraon	L.T.	Katelinas
Rooney	L.G.	Anthonavage
Merchant	Center	Yanchulis
Judge	R.G.	Sochon
Eaton	R.T.	Clements
Beach	R.E.	Brown
Murphy	Q.B.	Foley
Daigle	L.H.	Carroll
Hughes	R.H.	Adamaitis
Calhoun	F.B.	Makofske

G. W. Will Depend On Spread Plays

their paces on the Washington U. field this afternoon they elicited the admiration of St. Louis College coaches who swarmed the stadium to watch the team coached by Pixlee, a former Missourian.

Few Substitutions.

On all sides were heard the comment that the Colonials are uniformly big and fast, and impressive, and the squad indeed was a spirited crew during the workout. The center of attention was Capt. Frank Kavalier, a native St. Louis lad, who failed to win a regular berth at center and now has been unable to regain the backfield post he held last season.

Despite the twelve backs with the squad, Backfield Coach Bill Reinhardt plans few substitutions unless he encounters injuries. His regular backfield of Kaufman, Turner, Jenkins and Reeves will start the game and will be maintained in the line-up unless the speed of Vic Sampson is required. Fred Merka is the only other back who looms as a substitute.

Rice Back Polishes Passing Form

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, Mo., en Route to Texas, Oct. 29.

Forewarned is forearmed, according to Socrates or whoever it was that made the crack, and the George Washington football team thus will not be taken by surprise when it meets up with Rice Institute at Houston on Saturday.

POVICH.

Thanks to the diligent efforts of Publicity Man John Kingsbury Espey, who was dispatched to Houston a week ago in the interest of the pre-game ballyhoo, George Washington coaches are now fully apprised of the kind of battle they can expect.

On his departure from Washington, Espey had told Head Coach Jim Pixlee that if he came by any information concerning the Rice team while he was in Houston, he would advise Pixlee pronto. Despite the fact that his professional scouts had observed Rice's play in every game this season, Pixlee did not have the heart to offend Espey in his good intentions.

"Okay, Jack, that's fine," Pixlee told the little G. W. U. press agent patronizingly. "Whatever you hear, let us know. Maybe you can let us in on a couple of their secrets."

The George Washington coaches heard from Espey early this morning. As the G. W. special stopped at Pittsburgh, a telegraph boy came bawling through the Pullman in search of Pixlee. Awakening a dozen players and coaches before he found Pixlee's berth, the boy flourished a telegram and Pixlee, sleepy-eyed, signed for it.

Out in Houston, it seems, Mr. Espey had not been loafing on the job. Ferret Espey had not forgotten his promise to Pixlee. He had news, apparently.

Pixlee opened the telegram, looked at the signature. It was, indeed, from Espey. With sleep still very much in his eyes, he read this hot information about the team that had beaten G. W. 41-0 the season before.

"Rice has a strong team. They are not underestimating G. W." Jack Espey."

Pixlee blinked, was forced to admit that Espey was telling the truth, even if it were a truth of which the G. W. coaches had been painfully aware for more than 12 months. But again he did not have the heart to offend the little man who was very anxious about it all.

Shouting at the telegraph boy to come back, Pixlee grabbed a pad, sent the following message to Espey at Houston.

"Thanks a lot for your information. It is a big help. Continue to keep your ear to the ground. Jim Pixlee."

Pardon this reporter's wobbly pen, but I am still very much jittery after an experience on the G. W. U. special train this morning. In fact, I could use a stimulant right now.

Wandering through the players' car I noted a cute little canine on a leash and assumed it to be the team's mascot. Teams do have mascots, you know. So, dog-lover that I am, I began to pet the brute, simulating a deep growl I thought might interest him.

It interested him all right. Only the leash saved this department from becoming dog meat right then and there. Then I learned about the monster.

"Keep away from that hound," warned Botchy Kotch, the G. W. line coach. "He'll tear you up quicker'n a minute. That's a fightin' dog I'm taking to a friend in Texas."

A fighting dog? "Yeah, that's what he is," said Kotch. "He's an American Pit Bull. Fightin's his nature. He came outa the best litter of Pit Bulls in the U. S. Been fightin' up in Pennsylvania in those Pennsylvania dog fight pits. He's from a fightin' family."

A fighting family? "Yeah, his father killed 13 dogs in one tournament. And his mother killed his father in the same pit. This dog is going places."

So was I.

Bowie High Wins.

Burns' Revenge, Quick Count Help Olson Defeat Kampfer

An unexpected bit of strategy and a split-second 1, 2, 3 count by Referee Cyclone Burns, enabled Cliff Olson to defeat Hans Kampfer in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

Clifford was entangled in a full Nelson at the time the finish came. Seizing time by the forelock, since he could not get turned around to seize Hans, Olson jumped up in the air, placed his foot on the middle rope and kicked backward.

Kamper went tumbling down, with Olson on top of him.

Just a few minutes before, Referee Cyclone Burns had been submitted to an indignity. It seems that Burns had been protesting a hold which he declared was a strangle. Three times he made Kampfer break the hold, and after the third time Hans demonstrated on him, leaving him limp and exhausted.

Thus did Burns have hate and venom in his heart, and gained retaliation by a quick count.

Roosevelt Sees Chance to Beat Eastern

By John R. Vosburgh.

Still showing the effects of the 26-0 battering it received from Central's interhigh champions a week ago, Eastern High journeys uptown today to meet Roosevelt High at Roosevelt Stadium in the second interhigh game for both schools.

Three changes will be noticeable in the Eastern line-up when the teams take the field at 3:30 p. m. Injured in the Central game, Paul Kober, 175-pound tackle, Roy Michaels, fast, little halfback, and Bill Kemp, fighting center, will be unable to start.

Coach Artie Boyd is starting Harold Speith, one of the fastest ball carriers in the city, in place of Michaels. Speith, big, rangy and weighing close to 170, was carried off the field in the Central encounter with a back injury, but is all set to start today.

Roosevelt Changes.

Al Dickinson will start in place of Kober, while Bill Clift, weighing about 10 pounds more than the 145-pound Kemp, will start at center. Al Warner is a possible starting choice at end in place of either Kearney or Wade, while Charlie Camper is pressing both Spang and Spigoni for the starting guard assignment.

Four changes will also be noticeable in the Roosevelt starting cast. Displaying so much spirit in their workouts all week that Roosevelt supporters are even mentioning possibility of an upset victory, the Rough Riders are exuding plenty of confidence despite four straight defeats to date. The Roosevelt line will outweigh the Eastern forward wall by close to seven pounds per man.

With Oliver Atkinson, regular center, off the injured list, Coach Herman Littman is able to move Harry Moore, rangy sub-center, over to his normal post at end. Moore was outstanding defensively in the Western game. Bill Hammett, 175-pound halfback, will start in place of George Smith, who started the Western game, and Brennan, a 175-pounder, in place of Louis Green at tackle. Moore will replace Paul Dunbar at left end.

With these replacements certain to strengthen the Rough Riders, Roosevelt hopes are anything but dim despite the long odds against them to upset Eastern. The Rough Rider followers point to the fact that Western won on a couple of passes and were unable to gain extensively on running plays alone.

Episcopal Feared Too Sure of a Win

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 29.—Episcopal High School overconfidence, as the result of four easy wins in as many starts, was the problem confronting Head Coach Bick Cardwell today, as he watched his charges lag through their final drill in preparation for Saturday's game with McDonogh School, of Baltimore.

Because they had little trouble in stopping Gilman School, rated vastly superior to McDonogh, the Maroons are inclined to take the contest much too lightly, is the opinion of their mentor, and "unless the whole squad wakes up, they're riding for a fall."

With the varsity playing at 2:30, three other Episcopal teams will meet McDonogh elevens, the junior varsity, 130-pound, and 110-pound aggregations all seeing action.

Hobo Williams to Fight On Olin-Scott Program

Charles (Hobo) Williams, the colorful middleweight who is hot on the trail of Buddy Scott, reigning local sensation, will appear in one of the 6-round preliminaries to the Buck Everett-Bob Olin bout at Turner's Arena next Monday night. Williams will meet one Jackie Fitzsimmons, of Newark, N. J.

John L. Pavlovich, a sparmate of Olin's, will engage Georgie Terry, of Newark, in another six announced yesterday. The Shorty Ahearn-Billy Edwards colored bout and one other six yet to be announced, will complete the bill.

Little HoyaGrid Team Choice Today

The football rivalry between St. Alban's and Georgetown Prep will be resumed for the eleventh straight year today when the two schools clash at St. Alban's Field. On the basis of their records, Georgetown Prep rates a slight choice to win.

Coached by Ed Hargaden, former Georgetown University basketball ace, the Little Hoyas have swept to two impressive victories this season, a 13-0 win over Friends School and a 27-0 victory over St. Paul's of Washington. St. Alban's, on the other hand, has lost three games in four starts, but last week came through with a 13-6 win over Church Farms School, of Philadelphia.

Coach Bob Middleton's eleven has improved with leaps and bounds in pointing for the traditional conflict. Capt. Cary Grayson, son of the former White House physician, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, is the most serious threat the Albanites will bring forth, although young Bill Lane has come through in the last few weeks to clinch the starting berth at quarterback with some fine performances.

Regals Face Test In Sunday's Game

Regal Clothers, pacesetters in the National City Football League, will face the acid test of their scheduled Sunday in a game at Duffy Stadium with the Washington Cardinals.

Regal is leading the loop with two victories in as many starts, while the Cardinals have won one and lost one.

At Ballston, Arlington A. A. will engaged Palace A. C. Trinity draws a bye.

Both games will start at 2:30. p. m.

Central Jayvees Tie W.-L. 'B' Eleven 6 to 6

The Central High junior football team, composed of third and fourth semester youngsters, played a 6-6 tie with a bigger and older Washington-Lee High "B" team yesterday at Central Stadium.

Coached by Phil Fox, former Wilson Teachers star, Central outplayed their more experienced opponents virtually from the start. Central scored in the first period after Larry Picket threw a touchdown to Zimmerman for a 30-yard gain to the Little General 8-yard line. Picket then went off tackle for the touchdown.

The Central team will play the Western High Juniors Wednesday in Central Stadium at 3:30 p. m.

135-Pound League.

The Police Boys Club will operate a 135-pound class football league this year. Five clubs have already entered, namely, St. Martin's School, No. 5 Precinct Boys Club, Northeast Boys Club, Centennials and Virginia Avenue. All managers of applying teams must notify the No. 5 club by 4 p. m. today and have applications in by Tuesday, 7 p. m. Gold footballs will be given the winning team. All players will be weighed and fingerprinted.

Wilson to Meet Landon Prep Team Today

With Woodrow Wilson High improving as the season progresses and Landon Prep having already established itself as one of the stronger schoolboy clubs, what appears to be an evenly matched battle is expected when they clash this afternoon on the Landon field in Bethesda.

The Tigers of Wilson have scored impressive victories over St. Alban's and Friends i as many starts on successive week-ends and will be slight favorites to add the Landonites, who will be without the services of three injured regulars, to their list of victims. But it will be no set-up they meet.

Landon, boasting a heavy line and a speedy backfield, has an enviable record of its own, having defeated St. Andrew's and St. James' while dropping a close, one-touchdown game to St. Paul's. In defeating the St. James team of Wilmington, Del., they stopped a club which had not tasted defeat since 1933.

Miss Lynn's 386 Sets Duckpin Mark

Margaret Lynn set a new all-time league record of 386 with a set she bowled last night for the RFC team in the Ladies Federal League. She also rolled high game of 156.

Treasury No. 2 was high team with 551, while RFC rolled high team game of 1494.

Palais Royal bowling team gave Woodward & Lothrop its first setback of the season in the Department Store League last night by winning the odd game, while Lansburghs seized this opportunity by sweeping their set from Guy-Curran making a tie for first place with Woodwards.

In other matches S. Kann Sons Co., last year's champions, moved into third place by sweeping their set from The Hecht Co. Raleigh Haberdasher took the odd game from Wm. Hahn & Co., while Jelleffs did the same to Credit Bureau.

Crowd Attends Gala Inaugural Of New Movie

A gala crowd, led by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and chief executives of Washington theaters, last night dedicated Warner Brothers' new Uptown Theater at Connecticut avenue and Newark street northwest.

Lined with flags and multi-colored lights, Connecticut avenue for a five-block stretch presented Eighth Precinct police with a major traffic problem as hundreds of Cleveland Park residents jammed their way into the new modern motion picture house.

John J. Payette, Warner Brothers' general zone manager, was on hand to supervise the inaugural festivities, asisted by local and New York representatives.

"Cain and Mabel."

Under the glare of brilliant lights and photographers flash bulbs, the new community playhouse opened its doors to a preshowing of "Cain and Mabel," starring Marion Davies and Clark Gable.

Before the curtain rose, Commissioner Hazen in a brief address to the crowded house, welcomed the new theater to Washington. He told of watching the Cleveland Park section grow from rolling woodland to its present center of flourishing business. He urged residents to support the new showhouse and its manager, Walter Cersley.

Landon Carries Straw Election At American U.

Gov. Alf M. Landon nosed out President Roosevelt in a straw election at American University yesterday after students rallied to the support of their Presidential favorites in a political mass meeting.

Landon received 109 of 225 ballots cast. Roosevelt's total was 98. Twelve students were for a "third party," and eight were undecided.

The students, about one-half of the student body, met in the univeristy assembly hall during the noon hour for a forum on campaign issues. They were asked, on the ballots, to note their Presidential choices "before the discussion" and again "after this discussion."

An hour of speechmaking and debate notwithstanding, student opinion did not waver. There was no shift from the Roosevelt to the Landon column, or vice versa. The effect of the rally, however, was to strengthen convictions.

When the meeting was over 98 students said they were "more firmly in favor" of Landon, while 78 were more convinced than ever that the President should be retained in the White House. Eight students were "still undecided."

Sidney Sachs, president of the Student Council, was chairman of the rally, and with a firm hand on the gavel insisted that the debate stick to campaign issues.

Odel Rosen, the Roosevelt keynoter, declared the present Administration had improved business, and charged the Republicans with Fascist tendencies. Charles Stewart, holding a copy of the United States Constitution aloft, insisted that the country was "recovering in spite of Roosevelt, not because of him."

Stewart admitted that Landon once favored Federal relief, but had found out "by trial and error that Federal relief didn't work—naturally he changed his mind."

New Safety Zones Will Be Bisected, If P.U.C. Has Way

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday decided to recommend to the joint board comprising the commission and the District Commissioners that the new streamlined safety zones have their tails severed from their bodies.

Acting on the 70 zones established on Wisconsin avenue and Seventh street by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, the commission held that the tapered end of the zones should be separated from the main part of the zone.

The basis of this recommendation, Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman said, is that the commission thinks pedestrians should be discouraged from standing in the narrow end, which is designed to detour motorists.

Store Pays Honor To FoundersToday

Ceremonies honoring the memory of Gustave and James Lansburgh, founders of Lansburgh & Bros., will be held at the store at 8:30 o'clock this morning. Employes will be assembled, together with specially invited guests, and addresses will be made by Ralph Goldsmith, general manager, Mark Lansburgh and others.

The ceremonies will take the form of a tribute to the founders who launched the business in a small store 76 years ago today and to the policies which they began, according to James Rotto, sales manager, "of integrity in merchandising and sincerity in service which their succeeding generations have striven to emulate."

At the same time there will be a special ceremony held in honor of employes who have been with the store 20 years or more. They are Max Hirsch, 43 years; Marx E. Kahn, 41 years; Henry T. Waesche, 33 years; Hull T. 2 Hearings Set On U.S.-District Fiscal Policies

Officials and Department Heads to Give Data to President's Unit.

The President's fiscal relations committee yesterday invited the District Commissioners and their department heads to separate hearings next month for suggestions on drafting a formula for Federal participation in the District government's operating costs.

The department heads were asked to appear before the committee on November 7, at 10 a. m., while the Commissioners and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan were invited on November 21 at the corresponding time.

A two-day hearing was held last Friday and Saturday for civic and trade organizations.

District officials already have given J. L. Jacobs, director of the study, voluminous data on the costs of municipal services to the Federal Government.

Department heads are now engaged in drafting reports to justify the administrative costs of the District government, and it is expected they will submit these reports at the November 7 hearing.

Clothes Donations Asked by Mission

Biting winds, frost, late November rain and snow soon will set teeth to chattering around Central Union Mission unless kindly Washingtonians bring their spare garments there to keep some of the Capital's needy warm.

A plea of clothes of all descriptions was made yesterday by John S. Bennett, superintendent, who said the mission's wardrobe is sadly depleted.

Warm clothing for needy boys and girls in the Children's Emergency Home of the mission also must be obtained. The children there range from 3 to 12 years in age, and there are 40 youngsters in the home. Mission workers will call for the garments if would-be-donors telephone National 4349.

That's me pointing to the picture of Harry Wilken the first. He was my father's father and a grand distiller so they say. And so was Pop. That's my brother William Wilken to the right and my brother-in-law Tom to the left I guess it's a better picture of our dog Jessie than of Grandpa Wilken! Harry E. Wilken

...and this is our Family's Recipe

Like as not when you taste our Family's whiskey, you're going to say it's got a tastiness to it more than any other whiskey you ever yet sampled. And maybe you'd like to know why that is. Well, for one thing—we've been making whiskey since goodness knows when. Harry Wilken the first—our Pop's father—made it. And Pop picked it up where he left off. And now we're making it. You know it takes quite a while to get the hang of making good whiskey. But being at it 50 years or so, our Family's naturally picked up quite a few things. And everything we've learned is in this one whiskey. It's our own Family's Recipe—and you never tasted anything quite so mild—or near so tasty! Harry E. Wilken
